Task Force Set On Health, MDs

A task force has been set up to study the distribution of doctors and the cost of health care in B.C.

Health Minister Bob McClelland said today the six-member medical manpower committee will be chaired by former Socred health minister Wes Black.

Black will be paid $17,500 for a six-month contract and $150 a day after that.

The committee will also probe the per capita cost of medical care in B.C. which last year was $102 compared to the national average of $83.50.

B.C. may be overstocked with physicians and overserviced, McClelland said.

Physicians and health officials have tried to solve the problem in the past with little success, McClelland said.

Black said the uneven distribution of doctors — especially specialists in rural areas — is the number one problem in the delivery of health services.

McClelland said the oversupply of certain specialists in the Lower Mainland and Greater Victoria means those physicians are not working at their optimum, with the result that they do not have enough opportunity to refine their skills.

Vice-chairman of the advisory committee is PhyHis Whittome, a registered nurse on the board of the Cowichan hospital and a former president of the B.C. Health Association.

Four other persons from the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, the B.C. Medical Association, the ministry of health, and the health education advisory council will be named to the committee.

Black, who served in the legislature from 1952 to until his defeat in 1972, said the committee will hold its first meetings soon.

He said it is likely the committee will hold public hearings throughout the province.

One earlier proposal to even the spread of doctors was to insist all physicians moving to B.C. serve a term in the north.

A human rights board of inquiry later ruled this was a contravention of human rights.

McClelland said he would like to have the committee's recommendations within the next six months but he has put no time limit on their task.

He said Black is well qualified for the job and that the medical insurance scheme now in effect in B.C. was founded by him.

CABBIE SHOT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cab driver Thomas Man Tang, 26, of Burnaby was in poor condition today after being shot in the head by his passenger.

Police said they believed Tang was shot after he refused to hand over $60 or $70.

SORRY ABOUT THAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hank Obester, who works for a city bulldozer firm, was demolishing a city house Thursday when he noticed the electricity was still connected.

He was wrecking the wrong house.

Johnny Walker, owner of the bulldozing firm, said he and Obester are sick about the mistake, the first time it's happened in the company's 15 years.

Walker said he hopes to persuade Williams to allow him to complete the demolition and haul the wreckage away free. He has been unable to contact Williams in Hawaii.

There was no estimate of the value of the house, a rental property that was vacant.

Yawns and Attacks Greet Throne Speech

Political reaction to Thursday's throne speech outlining the Social Credit government's programs in the coming session ranged from Liberal leader Gordon Gibson's yawn to mock indignation and an election challenge from NDP leader Dave Barrett.

"Typical. I'm underwhelmed," Gibson said.

The throne speech according to Gibson, was little more than free television publicity for the government.

"Without a doubt the worst in 18 years," Barrett said.

"The man (Premier Bill Bennett) is out of touch with reality."

The NDP leader said there isn't a shred of evidence in the speech to indicate there is relief in sight for B.C.'s more than 100,000 unemployed.

Barrett urged the government to immediately begin negotiations with Alaska and the U.S. governments to push the B.C. railway through to Alaska to open up the north and create jobs.

Tory leader Vic Stephens was less indignant.

He called the speech tame and lacking substance although he said he was pleased the government recognizes the main problem facing the province is unemployment.

The newly elected MLA for Oak Bay proposed a three per cent reduction in sales tax as

PUBLIC MISCHIEF, FRAUD

Tory Bug Case . . . Two Charged

OTTAWA (CP)—Three criminal charges each have been laid against William Sandiford and Daniel McGarry, partners in a Toronto firm which said it found bugging devices on Opposition Leader Joe Clark's telephone and in the office of Conservative MP Elmer MacKay, police said today.

The two men will appear in provincial court here Monday to face charges of public mischief, illegal posession of listening devices and attempt to defraud the Conservative Party.

An Ottawa police spokesman said the investigation is continuing, but would not say whether further charges might be laid.

The charges followed a raid Thursday on the Toronto offices of Uniserv Sound and Signal Inc..

Ottawa police were called in to investigate after statements made last Oct. 31 by Clark and MacKay that alleged bugging devices were found in their Parliamentary offices.

MacKay, who represents the Nova Scotia riding of Central Nova, said Friday that he is surprised to learn of the charges. He stunned the Commons last Oct. 31 when he announced that a small, operative electronic listening device had been found in the bottom of an armchair in his office.

MacKay reiterated past statements that Sandiford and McGarry happened to be in Ottawa that day on another case and offered to electronically "sweep" MacKay's office for bugs. But he added today that they were not paid.

Later Oct. 31 the same men found what they described as a suspicious black foreign object in a telephone in a conference room in Clark's office.

Their report said the device was "capable of being used as an eavesdropping device," but Bell Canada investigators said it was standard equipment.

Centurion is a far-flung organization with branches in more than a dozen cities, including Europe, a staff of about 500, and a reported income last year of some $12 million.

Clark's office would not confirm a report in the Ottawa Citizen that the Conservative party was billed $13,500 for the sweep of Clark's office. The newspaper quoted a Conservative party spokesman as saying the party negotiated the bill downward but had not yet received Uniserv's final bill.

Ottawa Seeking Long Beach Camp

Monday Night Winner?

John Travolta, backed by an exciting musical score, has turned Saturday Night Fever into a highly-successful film.

Critics admired the energy and charm of Travolta and he has been nominated best actor for the annual Academy Awards.

The Times and CJVI are offering a chance on a trip for two to Hollywood plus 10 major secondary prizes for those correctly predicting the Oscar winners for best actor, best actress and best movie. Official entry form is in the advertisement on page 16.

All entries must be received by 4 p.m. Monday to be eligible.

Travolta was the only nomination for Saturday Night Fever, although many critics had spoken highly of the music by the brothers Gibb, the Bee Gees.

The Oscars will be announced in a telecast Monday starting at 7 p.m.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government is negotiating the purchase of a privately-owned campsite at Long Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island, even though it admits it could build a more appropriate campsite at lower cost on its own property.

Parks Canada, however, is desperate for camping spaces in the area, and is looking seriously at a campground for which developer Bert Braiden is said to be asking $3.5 million.

"Braiden has us where he wants us," says Frank Camp, superintendent of the wilderness Pacific Rim park which adjoins Braiden's campsite. "He is pretty well in a position to command the price tag he wants."

MLA Robert Skelly (NDP—Alberni) said the situation is indicative of the whole approach to development of the park which takes in Long Beach.

"The whole way Pacific Rim park was conceived was a lousy use of taxpayers' money," says Skelly. "Braiden's property is just one example of exorbitant prices which the government is forced to pay for private properties in its attempts to buy up every chunk for the park overnight.

"People in this area are disgusted with the whole thing. I've heard numerous complaints about the esthetics of the campsite itself."

Braiden, the millionaire owner of an Alberta oil construction company, first proposed his campsite two years ago on 217 acres bordering the north end of the park, six kilometres south of Tofino.

"Parks Canada encouraged Braiden to build and said that 'if you develop campsites we won't'," said David Street, assistant direc-

QUAKES REPORTED

Associated Press

A moderate earthquake rocked a wide and heavily populated section of the Puget Sound region early today, and another shook an area 115 kilometres northwest of Anchjorage on Thursday.

There were no injuries or damage reported in either one.

In Alaska the quake registered 5.4 on the Richter scale. The Seattle-area quake re-4.2 and appeared to be centred about halfway between Tacoma, on the east side of the sound, and Bremerton, on the west.

He'll Keep On Working

James Parsons is operating his one-man View Royal garage just as he's done for 30 years despite the fact he won $100,000 in the Express lottery.

"I don't plan to retire, I enjoy my work too much," he said in an interview today.

"I'm in my early 60s now but I haven't given much thought about retiring. I'm not sure I would enjoy it."

Parsons, of 488 Walter Avenue, said he was still a little stunned by the windfall.

"It takes a bit of getting used to. I've only bought a few lottery tickets, about a dozen, I guess."

The only celebration might be a trip but he'll first have to find someone to run the garage.

Parsons said he had hoped to avoid publicity about the win but sighed resignedly when informed the Winnipeg lottery office publicizes the names of all known winners.

"I hope the phone doesn't start ringing about this. I really don't want to be bothered with a lot of calls."

His wife, Amelia, agreed they would prefer as little publicity as possible.

"We're very conservative people," she said. "We may take a little trip as a result of this but we won't rush into anything. It takes a little while to get over the shock."

218% Pay Hike in Year for Sen. Lawson

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Two prominent Canadian labor leaders have received personal salary increases in excess of the federal wage guidelines which apply to most rank and file union members in Canada, according to documents filed with the U.S. department of labor.

The two are Senator Ed Lawson of Vancouver, Canadian head of the Teamsters union, and Dennis McDermott of Toronto, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers and a candidate for the presidency of the Canadian Labor Congress at the CLC's weekend convention in Quebec City.

The U.S. labor department documents show that Senator Lawson, who was the only major labor leader to endorse the Trudeau government's wage and price control program when it was introduced in 1975, received a personal salary increase from the Teamsters in 1976 of 218 per cent, or $39,184.33.

In 1975, according to the documents, Senator Lawson received a total of $26,805.42 as a 12th vice-president of the U.S.based International Teamsters Union. Of this total, $18,000 was in the form of salary; $5,897.50 in "allowances;" and $2,907.92 for hotel and restaurant expenses.

In 1976, the documents show, the B.C. union leader received a total of $70,817.08 from the Teamsters in his capacity as 10th vice-president, international representative and conference chairman.

Of this total, Lawson received $57,184.33 as salary; $8,915.00 in "allowances;" $1,960.74 for hotel and restaurant expenses; and $2,757.01 for transportation.

Part of the 1976 salary increase may have been to compensate the senator for his apparent promotion from 12th to 10th vice-president and the assumption of expanded duties. The documents do not, however, disclose how the additional compensation was calculated.

McDermott, who is favored in the campaign to succeed Joe Morris at the helm of the CLC, was paid a total of $53,190.89 by the UAW in 1975 in his capacity as vice-president, according to the labor department documents. Of this, $38,702.38 was salary and $14,488.51 was for expenses.

In 1976, the documents show, McDermott received a pay boost, but it was within the guidelines established by the Canadian government. His total compensation for the year was $54,709.24, of which $40,608.24 was salary and $14,101 was expenses.

In 1977, however, McDermott received a pay raise totalling $3,784.61, or almost $1,800 more than the $2,400 annual maximum available to other workers under the Trudeau government's wage and price control program. McDermott's total compensation in 1977, the documents show, was $59,021.87. Of this, $44,392.85 was salary and $14,629.02 was compensation for expenses.

Senator Lawson could not be reached for comment. His senate office in Ottawa said he was in Vancouver, but his Vancouver office said he was "out of town" and could not be reached by telephone.

In addition to his Teamsters' salary, Lawson also receives $31,200 a year as a senator, of which $5,600 is tax free. Thus, the independent senator from B.C. is now making an annual total of at least $102,017.08.

In endorsing the government's wage and price control program, which was condemned by almost every other labor leader in Canada, Lawson had praise for the "social contract" system worked out in Britain. Under the British system, every worker, regardless of position, was limited to a £6 increase.

Senator Lawson said at one

Western Made $5.6M

The Western Canada Lottery Foundation made a profit of $5.6 million on sales of $18 million during the fiscal year which ended March 31, 1977, says a report tabled in the legislature Thursday.

The report says revenues nearly tripled over the 1976 fiscal year and B.C. residents had purchased 47 per cent of all government lottery tickets sold in the four western provinces.

The report says $2,350,000 was transferred from the fund to B.C.'s special events fund, the physical fitness and amateur sport fund and the cultural fund.

More than 3,000 retailers and 300 non-profit distributors earned $2,061,000 in commissions during the year, the report said.

It also noted that the B.C. lotteries licencing section issued 820 bingo licences, 1,202 ticket lottery licences, 438 casino licences, 17 concessionaires licences, five agricultural fair licences and 41 social club licences.

Revenue from the issuance of these licences totalled $145,594; and the organizations which received the licences earned $8.5 million.

Rim Camp Wanted

tor of programming and development for the park.

"We couldn't build the same kind of set-up he's got. Parks Canada is not in the money-making business as Braiden is."

Braiden paid $860,000 for the land 10 years ago and spent $1.5 million to develop the campground which includes fresh water pumped under the ocean from a nearby island, a water and sewage system sufficient to service a town of 7,000 people, laundromats, gas pumps and pay showers.

His sites are built 10 to an acre compared to three or four to an acre in the less sophisticated Parks Canada campgrounds.

After three season, however, Braiden has decided to sell.

"If there was one already built, it was obviously to our advantage to buy it," said Street. "It would look unusual to start building our own 300-site campground when we had one sitting next to it up for sale."

There are now only two federal camp grounds in the Long Beach area between Tofino and Ucluelet: one has room for 90 vehicles and the other is a walk-in tenting area with 40 sites. There is a need for at least 400 more camping spaces.

Camp said that unless the national treasury board approves the purchase, the scene this summer in the park will be chaotic, and overcrowded.

But, despite the need, Camp is not happy about channelling overflow campers into Braiden's high-developed site. "Let's say I personally wouldn't want to camp there."

"Never, never, never," said Camp. "Under no circumstances will the beaches be opened for camping. We'll find out ways of accommodating the campers."

THRONE SPEECH ATTACKED

the best way to stimulate the economy and generate employment.

He said the proposals contained in the speech lacked solutions.

Gibson said the promised new Forest Act, urban transit proposals and the Family Relations Act are good but what is more significant are the omissions.

Missing are conflict of interest legislation which was promised last year; freedom of information legislation — legislation Gibson has long been pressing for — provision for controlling B.C. Hydro rates and indexing of benefits for seniors and handicapped which were promised by the Socreds during their election campaign.

At a press conference following the speech, Barrett asked if a promise of continued highway maintenance is worthy of being a major highlight of the speech.

How many jobs will filling pot holes create, he asked.

And he wondered how someone could dream up a scheme to increase the trades apprenticeship program when B.C. unemployment in the building trades is at 30 per cent and graduating apprentices can't find jobs.

As well as pushing the railway north, Barrett said the government should implement the Alberta royalty scale on coal which allows a royalty of up to $9 a ton compared to $1.50 a ton in B.C.

B.C. should also negotiate with foreign markets to have a percentage of Canadian coal carried in Canadian ships.

This would generate a ship building program in the province and with that the resulting employment, he said.

Barrett said Canadian banks have more than $6 billion in savings which has never been challenged by government.

Bennett should stop crying wolf and either get on with leading this province or call an election, Barrett said.

Ugandans Build Tall

Uganda House, three floors taller than the 12-storey U.S. mission next door, is topped by a penthouse with a landscaped terrace.

Ugandan diplomats refuse to say who will occupy the penthouse, but it presumably could be used for visits by President Idi Amin, who laid the cornerstone of the building in October, 1975.

Mostapha Musa Marjan of the Ugandan delegation says Amin will dedicate the building. He may come for a special session of the General Assembly on South-West Africa scheduled April 23-May 3, but he will definitely show up for the assembly's 33rd regular session starting Sept. 19, Marjan says.

The building is almost complete and the mission can start moving in in two weeks. Ugandan diplomats refuse to disclose the construction cost; other sources put the total figure at about $6 million.

The central African country's outstanding public debt totals nearly $220 million. On this, it pays more than $22 million a year in interest and principal, a staggering amount for a country which takes in less than $5 million a year in net foreign exchange earnings.

Weizman Flies Home, No Progress Sighted

CAIRO (AP) — Defence Minister Ezer Weizman flew back to Israel today, and Cairo Radio said he and President Anwar Sadat made no progress toward resumption of peace negotiations between Egypt and Israel.

The broadcast said Sadat was writing President Carter about the meeting, his first with an Israeli official in two months.

Weizman on his arrival back in Israel went immediately to report to Prime Minister Menachem Begin, the Israeli radio reported.

The Israeli minister's visit Thursday does not mean Egypt and Israel are "reopening the chapter of back-and-forth negotiations" that ended with the suspension of direct talks 10 weeks ago, said Dr. Osama el-Baz, Egypt's undersecretary of state for foreign affairs.

Meanwhile, refugees streamed back to their homes in southern Lebanon today as officers of the U.N. peacekeeping force continued negotiations with Palestinian guerrilla commanders to take over strategic positions.

Officials estimated 12,000 Lebanese and Palestinian families returned to their villages and camps in the south during the last three days. The government has estimated 200,000 persons fled the area during the Israeli invasion launched March 15.

Officials said Israel has ordered a dusk-to-dawn curfew throughout the 1,300-square-kilometre region its troops occupied south of the Litani River.

The cease-fire declared March 21 by Israel remains threatened by radical guerrillas who have said they will not go along with the truce orders of Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The PLO is the umbrella organization for the six major Palestinian guerrilla groups.

Strangler In Custody?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two childhood friends from Boston were in custody Thursday in connection with at least two of the 13 so-called Hillside Strangler slayings. One was booked for investigation of murder.

Police Chief Daryl Gates called the apprehension of George Francis Shamshak, 27, an escaped convict, and Peter Mark Jones, 37, a maintenance man working in Beverly Hills, a "major break in the case."

He said Shamshak and Jones were being questioned in the strangulation deaths of Jill Barcomb and Kathleen Robinson.

In Boston, state police said Shamshak told them he watched Jones kill three women in Los Angeles. Jones was later booked for investigation of murder, police said. No formal charges have been filed against Shamshak.

"We are very hopeful that it will solve those two (killings) and maybe more," Gates said.

Shamshak was serving a four- to five-year sentence for armed robbery in a minimum-security prison in Leominster, Mass., when he escaped in October, Gates said. He was apprehended in Cambridge, Mass., on Feb. 9 while visiting relatives and was sent to the state prison at Walpole, Mass., on an escape charge, the chief said.

Sea Of Bubbles Hits Bellingham

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Bellingham police officers might complain of dishpan hands.

Police said someone apparently dumped a bottle of liquid detergent into a downtown fountain Thursday, which soon overflowed with suds. The foam was so thick it reached to the height of traffic lights.

Both a fire department pumper and street sweeper failed to defeat the onslaught.

Finally, one officer recalled that the Georgia-Pacific forest products plant had an anti-foam agent. The agent was applied, the fountain stopped bubbling and the war was over.

A Pointless Exercise

It may be just barely possible that the provincial government is planning to do something during the upcoming months, particularly the legislative session that began yesterday. But if this is the case, it certainly isn't possible to tell it from the throne speech.

Even after the usual obituaries for former MLAs and lists of dignitaries who have visited B.C. in the past year gave way to what was supposedly the meat of the speech, the speech consisted of little more than a mish-mash of re-announcements of old programs, bits and pieces of motherhood philosophy, and ordinary government construction programs suddenly renamed "proposals for job creation."

The number of truly new programs announced for the first time in the throne speech can be counted on the fingers of one hand — to wit, a a new program of assistance for mining exploration and development; a Good Samaritan Act; a new program of parkland acquisition; a new wildlife management plan; and (possibly the only really interesting idea in the speech) a government review of all ministries to try to cut down on unnecessary, redundant or obsolete regulations.

And even with these programs absolutely no details were given, these being left for later legislation or the budget speech a week or so away.

For the rest, the assembled dignitaries heard for the 101st time the government philosophy that the private sector must be the main creator of jobs while the government should provide the "infrastructure and environment" (yes, even the lieutenant-governor's speechwriters have succumbed to bureaucratic jargon) in which job creation can occur.

But even while saying that, the government seemed to recognize that with 115,000 unemployed in B.C. (1,500 of them on the lawn while the speech was being read), it should at least show some indications that it was trying to solve the problem in a short-term way. As a result such items as highway maintenance, hospital construction and new court facilities suddenly became job-creation projects. However, it will be difficult, if not impossible, to tell how many jobs will be created that would not have been under regular government programs.

This is not to say, however, that the government plans no interesting or controversial legislation for the upcoming session. The budget speech may bring a few surprises; others may simply turn up as bills over the next weeks or months.

Once upon a time the throne speech was a major event in which the government actually unveiled most of its proposals for the upcoming year. But in the past decade or so the speech has become vaguer and more meaningless by the year. It now is little more than an afterthought to the 21-gun salute, the lieutenant-governor's arrival in his full robes of office and the other trappings of pomp and ceremony of opening day.

This being so, it might be better to abandon the throne speech altogether, simply have the lieutenant-governor declare the legislative session open, let the government present either some bills or the budget, and get on with the business of the day.

"... Arafat! ... look — no teeth! ..."

A Strong Speaker

North Peace River MLA Ed Smith having removed himself voluntarily from the job of speaker of the British Columbia legislature, it only remained for the government not to make the same mistake again.

And with the appointment of Chilliwack member Harvey Schroeder (unlike Smith, he has the approval of the opposition New Democrats), it appears that the tradition of the 1970s of naming weak and inept individuals to the position has ceased.

Somehow, just when a firm hand in the chair was needed most it seemed to have become a refuge for mediocrity, the instant solution to the untidy tag ends of a premier's difficult cabinet-making.

With weak speakers presiding over the legislature, the other 54 MLAs naturally ran away with horse and cart. They bent the rules, flouted the rules, threw the rule book in the speaker's face on one occasion.

Not even a speaker with the mediating skills of Solomon and the personal presence of Abraham Lincoln could have kept the lid on the madhouse which the B.C. legislature became on many occasions in the past seven or eight years, but naming nonentities to the post of speaker clearly aggravated the already deteriorating conditions.

With the well-liked and capable Schroeder in the chair, and Stephen Rogers (Vancouver South) as deputy speaker, the corner may have been turned. Perhaps debate will be just as acrimonious this session, but at least there will be chairmen who will brook no nonsense from either side.

MARJORIE NICHOLS

Where Has Kennedy Gone?

WASHINGTON — Occasionally, his picture appears on the social pages in connection with some good cause and, from time to time, there is a small news story tucked away on a back page. But Edward M. Kennedy is otherwise a politically invisible man these days.

The Massachusetts Democrat, now a greying and slightly paunchy 46, remains a dedicated spokesman for good liberal causes, from tax reform to universal health care to recognition of China to the need for tougher anti-trust laws.

Still, it is impossible to view the senator's record over the past 18 months and avoid the conclusion that the one-time golden boy from America's political royal family has deliberately retreated from the limelight.

A few weeks ago Kennedy addressed a prominent business group about the need for reform of antitrust law.

China Recognition

Last fall, the senator was prominent in the debate over the banning of saccharin. He also issued a statement of support for President Jimmy Carter's proposal to eliminate foreign tax deferral and three-martini lunches.

But on the larger and more controversial issues of the Carter era, from the Panama canal to the Middle East to SALT, Senator Kennedy has been less than voluble. It is almost as though the senator has plotted a course to keep his name off the front pages.

If so, he has succeeded admirably. In the past few months the Kennedy nieces and nephews have been getting more ink than Uncle Ted.

Nowhere, however, is the disappearance of Ted Kennedy more obvious than in the recent spate of editorial speculation about the fate of Jimmy Carter. It is said that the day after every inauguration the country's commentators begin casting about in earnest for a replacement.

The fact that the auditions for Carter's replacement have now begun may therefore not be that unusual. What is curious, though, is that for the first time in a decade Senator Kennedy's name has not made the lists.

The current wisdom is that if anyone challenges Carter for the 1980 Democratic nomination it probably will be California Governor Jerry Brown, the recycled Jesuit who is known to harbor national ambitions. In the last six months every major U.S. magazine has carried a Jerry Brown story, detailing everything from the governor's eating habits to his managerial style.

Brown has in effect assumed the role that has belonged to Ted Kennedy for so many years: pretender in waiting to the leadership of the Democratic party. It is the same role that was played for so many years by John Turner for the Liberal party of Canada. There are indeed some fascinating parallels between the political careers of Turner and Kennedy.

EDWARD KENNEDY
... retreated from limelight

Both came to national prominence in 1968 — Turner through his run for the Liberal party leadership and Ted Kennedy through the death of his brother Robert. Both enjoyed enormous recognition and popularity and, then, both dropped out.

There are many Canadians who believe that Turner, sensing the troubled times ahead, cleverly removed himself from public view in order to await a more politically propitious moment.

Absolutely no one who knows Turner really believes that he wants to spend the rest of his days toiling in a law office.

The same can be said of the senator from Massachusetts. No one really believes that Kennedy's true ambition is to sit in the U.S. Senate, accumulating seniority and a reputation for hard work.

No, a lot of people suspect that what Kennedy is doing is putting a bit more distance between himself and Chappaquiddick and staying discreetly out of sight while Carter self-destructs.

Kennedy's relationship with the White House is civil, if not warm. The senator has been, compared to other of his Democratic colleagues restrained in any public criticisms of the Carter administration. Kennedy is right now at work with White House staffers on a scaled-down model of the national medicare scheme promised by candidate Carter. On the other hand, the senator refused a request from the White House a few weeks ago to lend his weight to settlement of the national coal strike.

Shift to Right

Most political observers would point out that with the political winds shifting to the right, Kennedy's liberalism has diminished his attractiveness as a potential presidential candidate. For evidence, one need look no farther than Brown, who has been scrambling toward the right in an effort to bolster his own prospects.

Still, it cannot have gone unnoticed by such as Kennedy that Carter's main problem come 1980, may not be with the voters but with the Democratic party.

In recent months there have been growing rumbles of discontent with Carter from within the ranks of the Democratic party's traditional constituency — namely, organized labor and blacks. And it is among these two groups that Kennedy's popularity remains undiminished.

Should he decide to begin raising in profile, Kennedy has just been handed the perfect forum. Next January Kennedy is scheduled to take over the chairmanship of the powerful Senate judiciary committee from retiring Mississippian James Eastland.

RCMP Tops

I am a visitor in your beautiful city. I have previous knowledge of the Times, from some of its articles republished elsewhere. I know of some of its former distinguished editors and publishers.

I was, therefore, surprised at parts of your lead editorial of March 8, entitled Shabby Sordid Drama.

I refer specifically to the paragraph in which you refer directly to the RCMP and the individual who allegedly leaked secret reports of the RCMP security service to Tom Cossitt, MP. These reports are reported as describing the RCMP's knowledge of Russian intelligence service operations in Canada.

The editorial states: "The leaker's motive may be to display for all to see the vigilance of the RCMP's spycatchers, but it also shows a security service out of control, low in morale, fighting to maintain a few shreds of prestige as various judicial inquiries bring new disclosures daily of yet more illegalities committed in the name of upholding the law and national security."

As a former director of the RCMP security service 1947-1953, let me assure you that if any other security service in the western world had detected, exposed and ruined the operations of 13 Russian intelligence agents, as the RCMP did in recent weeks, that security service would have every right to feel proud of its success, and could anticipate some indication of satisfaction from the press and the people of its country.

But not in Canada. Oh no! In Canada, according to the Victoria Times, the security service is "low in morale and fighting to maintain a few shreds of prestige."

GEORGE McCLELLAN
... defends security service

If Mr. Cossitt is accurately reported and his source of information is correct, then the RCMP security service, in addition to the previously mentioned success, has indentified about half the staff of the Soviet embassy in Canada as Soviet spies — not a bad day's work in itself.

A recent statement issued by Sir William Stevenson may be of interest. He was the organizer and director of British security co-ordination during the Second World War. He is also a Canadian. The successes of his organization are the subject of a recent best seller entitled A Man Called Intrepid.

The statement was read into the record at a meeting in the council chamber of Whitby Town Hall, Ontario. He pointed out that he had maintained his contacts with the security services of the western world since the war. He wanted Canadians to know that, in his opinion, the RCMP security service was "tops." I was present, but I could find no report in the press of the statement. The media were also present.

Unfortunately, the efforts of Mr. Cossitt have informed the Soviet intelligence service, gratis, much of what Canada has learned of its clandestine operations in our country. Had the Russians obtained that information through their own efforts, someone would have qualified for the Order of Lenin.

Once the Russians are aware of just how much the RCMP knows of its agents and operations, it would not be too difficult to deduce just about how the information was obtained. Any good intelligence service can come that close — and the Russians are very good.

Once such information is known, all suspect contacts are dropped, sources dry up, and the opposing security service has to start that long laborious task of developing new sources all over again. It can take years.

If the security service has overstepped the limits of its jurisdiction, then bring it up short. But don't destroy the whole service of your country for mean political mileage, or a headline. You are going to need it very much in the years ahead. — Geo. B. McClellan, retired commissioner RCMP, 14011-101 Avenue, Edmonton.

Who's to Blame?

No one needs to be told that unemployment is serious, especially for the younger members of our society. All too often, however, the blame is misplaced. We are told that the present slump in the economy is a result of the affluence of Canadian life, that we must accept unemployment as a consequence of our prosperity.

Whatever happened to cries which linked the prosperity of corporations to the protective action of government? Alcan, Canadian General Electric, Northern Telecom and Falconbridge while laying off over 10,000 workers in the last two years, have benefitted from a total of $156 million in deferred taxes and $9 million in tax credits. More blatant is the case of Inco. While laying off a total of 3,450 Canadian workers, it has received (a gift of the Canadian people) $378 million in deferred taxes, a $25 million provincial sales tax exemption and a $70 million loan at below market rates.

The facts are clear — economic strategies which have allowed this corporate rip off of Canadian tax dollars, and at the same time have turned a blind eye to the job eradication programs of these corporations, must be smashed. — Joe Barrett, 1179 Munro Street.

True Socialism

The March 17 Profiles of Candidates (Oak Bay byelection) by Paul Nicholson came the closest of all to factual reporting on the Socialist Party of Canada's ideas. But he erred on three points.

1. The implication that Larry Tickner has represented the SPC a number of times. Not so. This was his first time for the party on the ballot.

More Letters on Page 10

2. That Larry Tickner "proclaims" that the NDP is not a socialist party. Our election candidates and the SPC as a whole have always supplied evidence through the years, much to the discomfiture of the NDP, the method being to appeal to workers' logic on the basis of reality, not "proclamations."

3. That because Oak Bay is a generally middle and upper income level constituency that Larry Tickner "... is tolerated, treated good naturedly like a fussing child, but not taken seriously except by a few" at all-candidates meetings.

As one who was at the UVic all-candidates meeting, this writer agrees with others there that the SPC candidate's address was the only one during which you could have heard a pin drop. This was partly because the income make-up of Oak Bay is not much different (maybe 85 per cent vs. 15 per cent) from the rest of the country's average of (90 per cent vs. 10 per cent) ratio between non-owners and owners of the means of life.

It is also true that at times during the question period when a money-less society of free access was inferred as the solution, some incomprehending laughter resulted. This revealed the as yet common gap between experience and the way that experience is evaluated in political terms.

No worker is totally committed to capitalism. The extent of his or her independent thinking involves reality, and harmonizes with the socialist analysis. Otherwise Larry Tickner would not have been the only candidate with an attentive audience at UVic. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Avenue.

UI Is Taxable

I have been reading carefully the various news items re Tony Puddicombe and Andrew Halper and the Downtown Eastside (Vancouver) Residents Association.

For 6½ years, from about 1964 to 1970, I was employed as a senior typist in various unemployment insurance offices, and am in receipt of a disability pension from that federal employment.

I have quite a lot of experience with unemployed persons' claims, as my work dealt with letters of disqualification, overpayments, appeals to the board of referees and labor disputes.

I believe Tony Puddicombe is either mistaken or he has been misquoted in the Times editorial headed No Help to the Cause (March 16). If you will check the 1977 income tax return, under "calculation of total income, income from other sources," item 13 reads "UIC Benefits (Attach copy 1 of T4U slip)." I think this should be mentioned if there is anything further to report on this incident.

Also, it is not illegal to ask your co-workers about wages or working conditions, although it may not be tactful when done by a new employee.

To pass on to another subject, the headline on a news article March 10 read: Government Employee Pension Fund $6B(illion) in the Red, Federal Pensions to Lose Indexing (cost-of-living increases now paid annually). I would like your Ottawa correspondent advised that not all retired federal government employees get to keep their "cost-of-living" increases. In my case, although I was employed as a clerk-typist for various offices in Vancouver, I was only covered for a pension plan during the last 6½ years. So I get a small disability pension and human resources pays a supplement under the handicapped pension (GAIN). The cost-of-living increase and any bank interest paid are deducted from GAIN. — Alyce D. Churchill, 2-507 Simcoe Street.

They Didn't Tell Us About China's Nightmare

By MARK GAYN
Toronto Star

All through China's nightmare decade of the Cultural Revolution, we had apologists in the West assuring us, in voices dripping with sincerity, that it was not a nightmare at all but a sort of exercise in spiritual uplift. (Miss Han Suyin, who graduated from syrupy romances like Love is a Many-Splendored Thing, to volumes laden with unbearably dreary Maoist quotations, was one of these.) The apologists travelled lucratively up and down North America, telling crowds eager to believe just how wonderful it all was.

Well, we now know we have been had. It had, indeed, been a nightmare, closely matching the horrors of Stalin's regime in the 1930s.

Take, for instance, the case of the Shanghai scientists, just publicized in the Peking People's Daily. Shanghai, you might remember, became the base of the radical bosses who (together with Mao Tse-tung's wife, Chiang Ching) managed Mao's Cultural Revolution. Mao himself was quoted as saying proudly, "It was I who started the fire . . ."

Around 1967, this band focussed on the Shanghai branch of the Chinese Academy of Science. The "little brother" of one of the four bosses was put in charge of science and technology in this great city. The "little brother" began to say that the departments of science were filled with "secret agents, counter-revolutionaries, cliques and imported goods" (international spies). "Secret agents," he said, "flourished like bunches of bananas."

SUYIN . . . syrupy uplift

In 1968 the verbal abuse took more sinister forms. The first target of "little brother" was the Natural Science Research Institute. Here, "after various kinds of fiendish and fascist torture," more than 100 scientists were denounced as secret agents. All made "forced confessions." The "little brother" claimed that it was not necessary to "go out of the gates of the institute" to find enemy spies, and a conference was called to popularize his experience.

At the Institute of Organic Chemistry, they began with three suspects. Eventually they had more than 100. The Peoples Daily quotes one of the hunters as saying, "When howling is heard at midnight, a confession is obtained at daybreak." Scientists were harassed, arrested and tortured. Their families were persecuted.

Typical was the case of Kuang Wu-han, an authority on electronics and head of the Institute of Precision Optical instruments. Back in 1953, Kuang and his family returned to Shanghai from Hong Kong. He worked on laser research, and was honored by the nation's leaders. However, as soon as the Cultural Revolution began, he was singled out for abuse. He was called "a slave to anything foreign" and, worse still, "British spy."

It's not always easy to understand the People's Daily jargon. But it reported he was "illegally isolated," and denied his pay. His wife was branded a spy, and "isolated" for nine months. His sister, who was in the Communist underground a dozen years before Mao Tse-tung came to power, was also called a "secret agent," demoted in her job, and had her salary cut. Huang's two children were "illegally isolated and investigated. Even the nurse who looked after the children was not spared."

As a result of the torment, Huang died.

In all, "several hundred" scientists in Shanghai were hounded, "isolated" or even tortured. Many died. Even those who were Communists when it was dangerous were denounced. And scholars who borrowed research material from a central institute were called "secret agents."

Now, with the new rulers in Peking seeking to end the nightmare — and to revive scientific research — Prof. Huang has been exonerated. His death has been proclaimed to have been "in the line of duty." His family was given his pension and burial fees. And the party is now writing letters to all departments where his wife, sisters, children and the children's nurse are working to restore their good name.

This is what happened in the 14 research institutes in Shanghai. But how many thousands of intellectuals were hounded in other great cities? How many professors committed suicide after being degraded at mass rallies? And since the campaign affected many other groups, from party veterans to factory managers, the number of victims — and their relatives — must have run into hundreds of thousands, if not more.

Not surprisingly, "the research work was seriously undermined, or suspended for a long period. Some laboratories were dismantled and all reference materials were lost. Some scientists lost all the . . . notes they had painstakingly compiled for years."

It was a decade of terror on a gigantic scale. Some 12 million young people, shipped out to the wilderness, lost 10 years of learning. For the entire nation, Mao's last decade was one of retrogression — and it may take twice that long to put the country back on the road to progress and greatness.

We already know that there had been a rich illicit literature. But some day, I hope, we will also learn that there had been a Chinese Alexander Solzhenitsyn to chronicle for us the terrible story of that decade.

But if all the revelations in Peking and Shanghai come now as a shock to us in the West, the blame squarely falls on those who in this terrible decade joined hands to deceive us.

There Are Some Powerful People Who Don't Want You to Have Pay TV

By DENNIS BRAITHWAITE
Toronto Star

If it's all right for me to pay $4 to see an American movie at a theatre in a plaza, what's wrong with my seeing the same movie at home, via pay-TV, for $1?

Is the current cable industry proposal for pay-TV tantamount to "national cultural suicide," as the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) has warned? If our national culture is so feeble that it can be destroyed by reserving one UHF channel for a largely American-content service that Canadians must pay to see, then there's no hope for us anyhow.

Pay-TV has been struggling to get born for just about 20 years. One of the early arguments against it was that people would not pay for a service that now comes to them "free." But that notion was long ago exploded when viewers began signing up for cable service, which charges them a monthly fee that is steadily increasing and in some cases also requires the use of converters which the customer must buy. In short, we have a form of "pay-TV" now.

Who stands to lose from the introduction of pay-TV? A number of powerful groups, the private networks and stations, advertisers who now allocate most or all of their budgets to TV sponsorship and are doing very nicely, thank you, and the movie theatre distributors and owners. Obviously, if pay-TV becomes a universally-accepted form, all of these interests will suffer heavy financial losses.

Until now their presumed lobbying has been able to stop pay-TV in its tracks. But how long can they hold it back?

As movie-going costs increase and as advertisers continue to debase regular television, demands for cheap, commercial-free home entertainment via television are bound to increase.

Michael Hind-Smith, head of the Canadian Cable Television Association, which is poised to introduce pay-TV, calls this "a shift away from advertiser-supported broadcasting to a subscriber-supported broadcasting system."

That trend is already under way. WNED-TV, the Public Television station in Buffalo and its excellent FM radio station, boast of being supported by contributions from listeners and viewers. Their audiences, which include a large number of Metro Toronto devotess, appreciate the high-quality, plug-free broadcasting service enough to peel off a few bills every time WNED makes its appeal for support. Other funds come from the U.S. government and large American corporations (who get a mention, but are permitted no sales pitches).

It was never ordained in heaven that television must be a commercially-operated and controlled service. It happened that way because the new medium was developed by the same people who already controlled radio. It was just a matter of providing pictures to go with the sound.

NBC, CBS, ABC, the giants of U.S. radio, became the giants of U.S. TV. The publicly-owned CBC, which had always operated as part sustaining, part commercial, simply enlarged its plant and bureaucracy to take in television. The same old gang in both countries are running the whole shebang.

In Canada, where a law is considered the answer to everything, legislation will be relied upon to stop pay-TV where economic interests have done the job in the States. The CRTC, Big Brother of our culture, our conscience, our immortal soul, has raised the cry of national survival and called on the government to rule pay-TV "premature," which means, in fact, "no way."

If, as the CRTC and some other guardians of the national psyche seem to feel, pay-TV poses a threat to the CBC and therefore to our national identity, there is a remedy, an ideal one, too, involving as it does the passing of another law.

Let there be a licence fee established to finance the CBC, along with increased subsidies from general revenues. Abolish all commercials on the system, then let the private broadcasters, the existing advertiser-supported ones and those who want to charge viewers a fee for service, fight it out for survival.

Since both depend largely on American products, we will end up with two parallel systems, one all-Canadian, tax-supported, the other Canadian-American, operating in the free market.

This should satisfy everybody and put an end, once and for all, to the continuous moaning and hand-wringing over threats to the CBC and our poor old cultural identity.

UK Pensions

A few people of British origin now residing in Victoria have written to the British prime minister and other members of the British Parliament endeavoring to obtain an increase in their old age pension, which was frozen at the rate being paid when they emigrated.

Although Britain has reciprocal arrangements with 28 countries, which allows the current pension rates, and increments when given, to be paid to those British emigrants resident in any of those nations, no such agreement has been concluded with Canada, although the Canadian government recently enacted new legislation to enable an agreement to be made.

The stock reply from the British minister states, quote: "Exploratory talks with the Canadian government have taken place, but due to the prevailing economic conditions and the very severe financial constraints applying in Britain, no early decision can be expected. Indeed, any proposal for such changes which might result in an increase in old age pensions payable in Canada, must be considered in competition with other proposals for social assistance."

This statement is totally unacceptable from a socialist government whose proud boast is their feeling for the needs of the people, and who are generally conscious of the sincere pleas of the lower paid and the aged, but not withstanding their call for restraint in public spending, found sufficient to allocate many, many millions of pounds sterling to aid and assist foreign powers.

Many of our senior citizens are feeling the strain of the ever-increasing cost of living in Canada and with dwindling capital are very close to real want.

There are about 22,000 people living in Canada and drawing the British old age pension, so I am informed, and the cost to the British exchequer to increase the pension to coincide with the present rate, would amount to approximately nine million, but some of this would possibly be offset by the reciprocal arrangements with Canada.

Will all interested people write to me at the address given below? Give your name and your present address and any pension details that can assist the British department of health and social security to identify you bona fides.

These letters will be sent as a petition to the minister, with a further request for a reciprocal agreement with Canada to be expedited and concluded, as a very urgent requirement for the welfare of thos old age pensioners resident in Canada. — W. Stringer, 500 Whiteside Street.

Preserve the Castle

Craigdarroch Castle often seems to have more appeal for out-of-towners than for the residents of Greater Victoria.

The Castle Preservation Society, which is determined to save this historically priceless landmark, has just received a letter and a cheque from Mr. and Mrs. James W. McGrath of 2813 Speas Road, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, who are society members: "We appreciate receiving your annual report. We always enjoy reading it and learning what is being done for the preservation of our favorite historical landmark."

Such appreciation from so far away is certainly appreciated. Our American friends do a great deal to help in the restoration and maintenance of Craigdarroch.

The Castle Society also thanks Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy and the provincial government for its annual grant of $12,000, which goes into security and restoration of Craigdarroch.

Our sustaining members, at $25 a year each, are the very lifeblood of the society. However, very few people in the tourist industry are on this list. The society is still astonished that the Chamber of Commerce, and the Junior Chamber, withdrew their sustaining memberships.

The Castle Society expresses its appreciation to all who are assisting in this vast undertaking. Very few places in North America have such a building, and it must be preserved at all costs. — James K. Nesbitt, President, The Castle Society, P.O. Box 147, Victoria.

Support Symphony

Once more the end of the symphony season is fast approaching — this time, the end of an era. Maestro Laszlo Gati will no longer be with the orchestra when the curtain goes up next season.

We all realize that the arts constantly have financial troubles. There are no real values that one can apply to artists who are willing to share their gifts with others. Right now there is a very real possibility that the Victoria Symphony Orchestra will end the season with a deficit of some $65,000. Ticket sales are down and general support is sadly lacking this year, yet the calibre of the orchestra is tops. Both guest conductors, Evans and Nero, were very impressed with the superb quality of the musicians. It is a sad state of affairs when there is no hope of continuing the growth of our orchestra because there is no money!

To kick off a fund-raising battle, the orchestra members have offered their services free for an extra special concert to be held April 23 at the Royal theatre with a reception following. Tax deductible, the tickets will be $25 per person. It is either full support for this plan or the Victoria Symphony Orchestra dies! Yes, it is as serious as this, ask any of the directors who attend the meetings (half of them don't) and they will tell you.

There must be a reason for this lack of support, please help us determine what it is. What do you, our patrons, think of the concerts? What would you like to hear — guest artists, favorite composers, etc? Next season promises to be very exciting with 10 guest conductors (possible candidates as resident conductor). Full houses are a must. This is a plea for survival. Please don't let our fine musicians down.

Remember, support our symphony orchestra, show it must stay and grow! Buy your tickets today for the benefit concert — April 23 in the Royal Theatre.

Thank you, Mr. Gati, for giving us such a fine orchestra. — Mrs. Valerie Gervais, Board of Directors, 4121 Telegraph Road, Cobble Hill.

Hates the Poor

There's nothing wrong with Bill Vander Zalm that oral surgery won't cure — like welding his teeth together. If this sounds a trifle hostile, it is. The lunacy of the minister's latest statements on unemployment insurance have almost stretched my patience and reason to the breaking point.

First of all, I don't collect UI, nor do I collect welfare. I finally (seven months, two sets of heels and one pair of soles later) found a job. I am one of the lucky ones.

Back to Vander Zalm's statements. Reading them convinces me that he is completely out of touch with reality as far as the job scene is concerned. His fallacies are numerous, but let me zero in on two: during my long period of unemployment, I spent countless hours at Manpower and talked to many people, most of them on UI (at various rates — note that). These people want jobs, they are not there for the scenery. Cutting benefits would not solve the problem, but merely add to their misery.

Next, if he walked into Manpower on a busy day (every day) and shouted: "Who wants a job for four or five dollars per hour?" I guarantee he would be swamped by UI recipients ready to start in and work (including those at maximum rate).

There is a national unemployment crisis, so industry couldn't employ "thousands and thousands" more workers at any price. That statement is by far the most ridiculous utterance by the minister (or anyone) in some time.

The crux of the matter seems to be that he regards the unemployed as lazy, shiftless bums. Barrett may have been close to the truth when he stated that he (Vander Zalm) hates poor people. (Incidentally, my job pays a staggering $3.50 per hour and I start at 6:30 in the morning and get up at 5. After taxes I clear considerably less than I got on UI.)

It's times like this that I wish Vander Zalm had won that seat as an MP when he ran for Trudeau's Liberals in 1968, which would have turned him into a harmless backbencher, toeing the party line, in some far-off city with no control over other people's lives. — Gordon V. S. Holmes, 304-2552 Vancouver Street.

Hydrodynamics President Voted off Company Board

VANCOUVER (CP) — Richard Oldaker, president and chief executive officer of International Hydrodynamics Co. Ltd., (Hyco) has been removed from the board of directors at the company's annual general meeting.

Oldaker lost his board seat Wednesday after two of three candidates nominated from the floor won directorships. Oldaker's name had been on a slate of six sitting directors nominated for re-election.

Hyco lost $1,074,096 in 1977 compared to a profit of $304,442 the year before. It manufactures a wide range of manned submersibles headed by the Pisces model at its plant in North Vancouver.

Dissatisfied shareholders questioned the role of the major shareholder in the company, the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. Ltd., of Britain.

Despite a call from the floor that P and O take a passive role in Hyco's affairs, the shipping giant was successful in increasing its representation on Hyco's board to two directors from one, through the election of an absent official not included on the slate of candidates advanced by management.

John Lambert, of London, the New P and O representative, was nominated by Dr. Jim Lindars, the existing P and O representative on Hyco's board, who was re-elected.

Oldaker was the only casualty among sitting directors. Defeated in his bid to rejoin the board of the company he helped found was Allan R. Trice, who before the meeting had circulated an attack on P and O to minority shareholders.

Trice, who holds 10 per cent of Hyco's stock, said a 1973 agreement with P and O called for the British company to advance $850,000 for development of a new submersible and supply a support ship. P and O dropped plans for the support ship and sought repayment of the $850,000 with interest, threatening Hyco's solvency.

Bart Tichelman, former Hyco vice-president of finance and administration, said the $850,000 was always described as a loan in annual reports and P and O had acted with integrity.

The annual report of the company said that $932,668 of the 1977 loss was attributable to the costs of launching Hyco operations in the United States and to non-recurring cost items in developing the new submersible.

GAS TEST SUCCESSFUL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Geological Survey says that successful tests of natural gas production have been completed on the first development well drilled in the East Barrow gas field of the northern Alaska National Petroleum Reserve.

Exploration of the field, then conducted by the U.S. Navy, uncovered the gas field last year; since then, what was once Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 4 has been transferred to the Interior Department by Congress with instructions to continue assessing the petroleum resources of the National Petroleum Reserve, as it is now known.

Hilton Transfers Manager

Burt, appointed general manager of Hilton Canada Ltd.'s Toronto Harbour Castle 14 months ago, has just been named vice-president of Hilton Canada and is being transferred back to Vancouver.

He is being replaced here by Louis Finamore, who has been manager of the Queen Elizabeth in Montreal for about four years but served mainly in Hilton International hotels in London and Barbados.

Hilton International has 72 hotels in 61 cities around the world and seven more are under construction.

Among other personnel changes, Denis Buchanan, manager of Hotel Vancouver, goes to the new Lesotho Hilton in Africa.

Beef Bargains at End, Say Cattlemen

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia cattlemen should expect good prices for beef for the next three or four years, Henry Blazowski, secretary-manager of the B.C. Cattlemen's Association, said Thursday.

He said cattlemen have been losing money for the past four years, but recent market price increases will give them an opportunity to make up some of the losses.

Top grade steers were selling $55 a hundredweight in Toronto and $53 a hundredweight in Calgary this week, an improvement from six months ago and equal to record price levels set in 1973.

Blazowski said inflation, international shortages, and Canadian ranchers selling off their animals after beef prices started to drop four years ago are responsible for the higher prices.

"The consumer has been getting bargain beef at bargain prices at the expense of the farmer," he said. "I just hope prices continue to rise so they will cover the cost of production and the devaluation of the dollar."

Blazowski did not say how much the farmer must receive for his cattle to break even.

He said it will be difficult for the federal government to check the price rise because a similar trend is occurring in the United States, Europe and Japan, pushing international prices up.

Blazowski said high beef prices normally lead to a massive buildup in breeding herds but it is not likely to happen soon as few producers can afford to buy breeding animals because they are so heavily in debt.

Meat packers said there are two outside influences which might affect beef prices this year — U.S. hog production and animal feed harvests this summer.

Packers say hog production is about 10 per cent lower than earlier anticipated and if the trend holds there will be less pork on the market.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Three persons jointly charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking elected trial by judge and jury in Victoria provincial court Thursday.

Twenty-three-year-old Paul Alex Rode, his 22-year-old wife, Brenda Lynn Rode, and his 19-year-old brother, Albert Martin Rode, all of 1760 Adanac, were originally charged March 23 and were released on $500 surety bail each by Judge Blake Allan.

Before Judge William Ostler, defence lawyer Douglas Christie made the election and a preliminary hearing date of Aug. 16 was set.

* * *

Two men facing three drug-related charges had their preliminary hearing date of April 5 changed to Aug. 17 and 18.

James Michael Mullin, 33, of Tofino and James Philip Reichert, 35, of 3991 Arlene Place were jointly charged with possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking, conspiracy to import cocaine and importing cocaine. Both elected trial by judge and jury March 20, when the April preliminary hearing date was set.

However, Crown counsel Malcolm Macaulay asked for the change because a number of his witnesses had to travel from Montreal and the prosecution was also experiencing delays in having documents translated.

* * *

Ostler handed out suspended sentences, probation and community service work to two young men in connection with a Feb. 26 break-in at Avis Rent-A-Truck, 1420 Quadra.

Edward Antonio Boldo, 20, of 611 Admirals and Donald Gordon McDonald, 17, of 310 Roberts pleaded guilty March 2 to breaking and entering and pre-sentence reports were ordered.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang reminded the judge that $1,287 in cash was taken from the company safe but that $1,061.90 had been recovered.

Both received suspended sentences, were placed on one year's probation and ordered to perform 60 hours of community service work. In addition, they were not to associate with one another for six months, to obey a 10 p.m. curfew for four months and make restitution of $75 each.

Theodore Kingsley Captain, 50, of 2073 Oak Bay was charged with possession of a stolen coupon debenture valued at $20,000.

Captain was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $500 and remanded until next Thursdaly for election of his trial method.

The debenture was alleged to have been stolen from the Vancouver office of Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation.

Claude Joseph Myette, 885 Craigflower, was charged with possession of stereo equipment alleged to have been taken from an Esquimalt apartment March 21.

"He was trying to sell what?" Ostler asked Lang incredulously.

"His girlfriend, Your Honor," Lang replied.

Lang was relating the circumstances after Stanley Stevens West, who was 18 on Thursday, pleaded guilty to theft under $200.

Lang said West was trying to sell his girlfriend's services to a man for $20 and fled when he received the money. He and the girl were arrested shortly after by Victoria city police.

Defence lawyer Allan Trann said West had been drinking since 7:30 that night, four hours before the incident, and said his client wasn't sure who approached whom. Trann asked Ostler to consider the 14 days West spent at Wilkinson Road jail awaiting disposition of the charge.

"Well, there's certainly something new every day," Ostler said.

Ostler handed out a suspended sentence, placed West on nine months probation, ordered him not to consume alcohol, to obey a 10:30 p.m. curfew during probation and attend the Metchosin camp program.

He said it was a "repulsive act" and an indication of an evil mind.

* * *

Fined for drinking-driving were: Leonard Richard George, 42, of Blackfish Road in Sooke, $500; Gary Roy Henderson, 34, of 10311 Pollard Place, $350; and James Anthony Goldsmith, 48, of Honeymoon Bay, $50.

In addition, Henderson was fined $100 for refusing a breath test demand and Goldsmith was ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work as well as take any drug and alcohol counselling as directed by his probation officer.

MELBOURNE (Reuter) — Australian biochemists have found a mechanism that may be responsible for initial stages of rheumatoid arthritis.

Long Parade And Speeches But No Work For Jobless

Some 1,500 demonstrators came from the mainland to join hundreds of others from Victoria and up-Island communities in a mass rally at the buildings.

"Maybe it didn't do any good," said one participant, "but at least you got to see people, not just numbers in the paper."

Throughout the morning the demonstrators gathered at the Memorial Arena and then at 12.30 p.m., escorted by four Victoria police motorcycle patrolmen, started their march to the legislature.

The rally was peaceful from start to finish.

Police had a token force of four men on the legislature's lawns during the demonstration and about eight others inside the building in case of trouble.

Parading down Douglas St. five-a-breast the protestors stretched for a dozen blocks through the heart of the city.

"This is awful," said one woman who stood on the sidewalk, her arms full of parcels.

"You hear about them, but when you see them collectively . . . it's sad, it's depressing."

The protestors massed on the lawns, as the third session of the 31st legislature got underway with the government promising to create more work by stimulating the private sector.

Meanwhile, outside, the demonstrators chanted "Down with Bennett" and "We want jobs."

Throughout the afternoon a steady stream of labor and political leaders addressed the crowd. Some, like Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, were drowned out by jeers and only two — NDP leader Dave Barrett and Vancouver Ald. Harry Rankin — won cheers.

Gibson told the gathering that there were 109,000 British Columbians out of work last February and the same number were without jobs this year. He said the economic affairs committee of the legislature should be set up during the session to study the situation.

"Go tell Pierre" chanted the crowd, eventually forcing Gibson to abandon the microphone.

Barrett said the government's throne speech had been long, empty and without hope for the unemployed.

Newly-elected Conservative leader Vic Stephens said the government should immediately announce reductions in both income tax and sales tax in an effort to create more jobs.

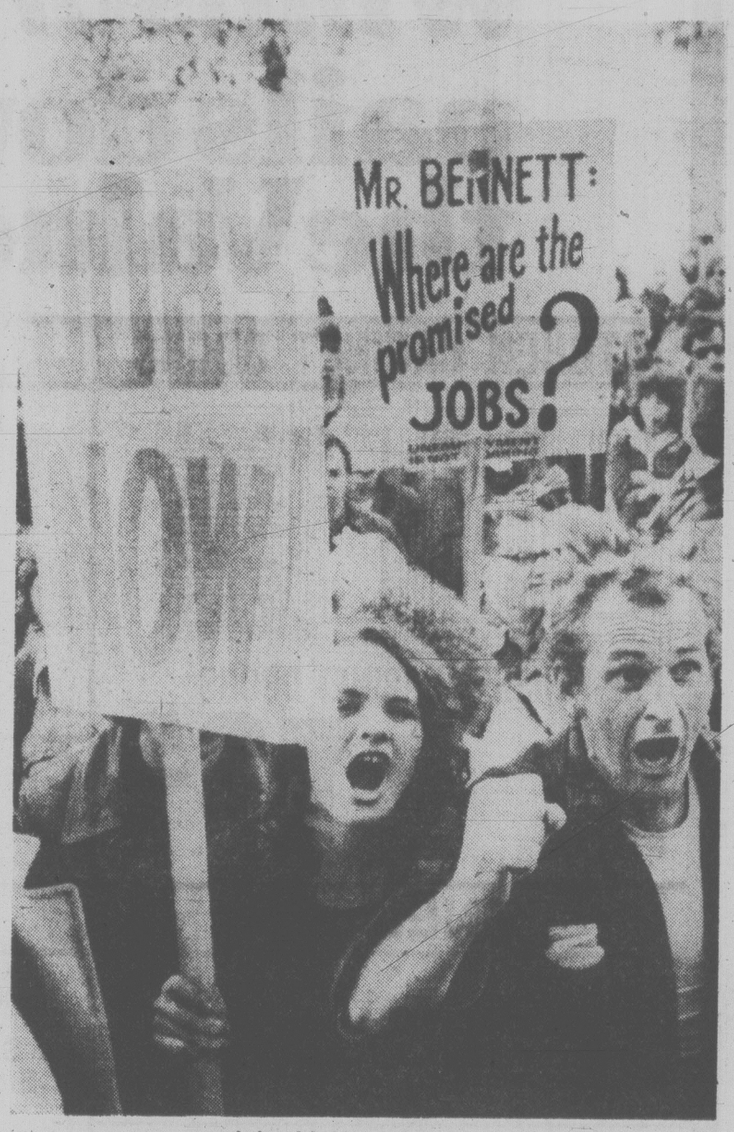

The only party leader not to speak was Premier Bill Bennett.

With the crowd chanting "We want Bennett out," federation secretary-treasurer Len Guy visited the premier's office. He returned to tell the demonstrators that Bennett had said he was too busy to talk to them.

The only Socred to show his face at the rally was Mines Minister James Chabot, who briefly stepped out onto the balcony overlooking the legislature's front steps.

"Jump, jump," cried the crowd.

Few Results

Arising from capitalism's overwhelming victory and my overwhelming defeat in the Oak Bay byelection I should like to express thanks to the small number who did take the trouble to turn out and make an expression of socialism, and to those members and supporters of the Socialist Party of Canada who made such a great effort in our cause. It must be heartbreaking for them to see such microscopic results for so much effort. Some small consolation can be had from the fact that some of our sympathizers made a last minute decision that it was more important to make a negative vote against Social Credit than a positive vote for socialism and the number of people who stayed home (enough to have elected any of the candidates) because they felt their man just couldn't win. The fruits of that decision will long be tasted by them and the Socialist Party of Canada.

In the future I will continue to help the socialist movement in my capacity as writer and publisher. I will also put all my efforts behind future candidates of the party. But, I feel the disastrous results of the election effectively discredit me from any future in that capacity. Hopefully socialists of better mettle will appear in the future.

Of a more personal nature, I would like to thank the couple who delivered a gift of two of my father's pastels to my home. When my father was alive, there was so much of his art around that we did not think much about it. Like many things, ir was only when he and his art were gone that we valued it.

I do not know the names of the couple nor from that great sea of houses exactly which one was theirs. But if they would be so good as to visit my home I will thank them more personally. — Larry Tickner, 598 Nora Place.

Indexed Pensions

A lot of verbal foam is being churned out over the issue of indexed civil service pensions. Some of the froth, especially on open line radio programs, free of the constraints of logic and fact, soars loftily into the never-never-land of wishful dreams and made-to-be-not-kept promises.

One of the magnum-voiced hotline demogogues crucifies the indexed pensioners with an accusation that, in a few years, their pensions would double.

1. Considering our booming inflation which compounds itself at a yearly rate of 10 per cent, this hotliner's salary, now in excess of $100,000, will double in approximately seven years, enabling him to earn over $200,000 by 1985, if he lasts that long.

2. In the face of a self-fuelling inflation which cannot be stopped, a universal indexing for all pensions is the only guarantee that we will be able to maintain our own standard of living during our own retirement. How else could we hope to live on present-day pensions, seven years from now, when most of the wages and salaries will double in response to prices which will have doubled also?

3. Indexed pensions cannot be equated with a cost-free miracle — they must be paid for by the future recipients themselves through contributions which must double also, in seven years, to keep step with the escalation of other related factors.

4. The handlers of pension contributions, be it government or private financial institutions, cannot be seen as anybody else but trustees and guardians of our pension funds and, as such, curbing their inherent itch to dip into the till, they should endeavor to administer our monies in an honest and financially sound manner.

5. Any non-indexed pension plan upon maturity will make its recipients into virtual paupers whose existence will have to be supplemented by welfare, which will become an unavoidable and ruinous burden on us all.

Let us guess the identity of the most likely torch bearer in this anti-indexing crusade. Could the slickness of the operation itself, perhaps, point towards the insurance industry whose aversion to indexing is understandable? It could lose a lot. Justly it fears that only those with holes in their heads would insist on sinking hard-earned dollars into life insurance schemes which, by virture of their profit structure, could not and would not offer anything matching the solid benefits and security of an inflation-proof, indexed retirement plan. — John Willow, Victoria.

Put Brakes On

It is not surprising that the school board turned down trustee John Young's suggestion that perhaps the public should be allowed to make suggestions regarding the saving of money, reduction of waste in schools or even attempt to create a more efficient system, when the board's own staff has been constantly ignored and excluded from any meaningful discussions for years regarding this very subject.

The fact that some taxpayers, in the near future, are going to be hit with a five mill increase in school taxes, in spite of chairman Sysan Brice's promise to save a million dollars, must surely make the public realize what a mess the board's priorities are in.

The recent statement by ex-trustee Lavinia Greenwood that the board is trying to "save face, not money" must be in part correct, because the board seems to have money in the budget for everything it requires. Part of the saving syndrome was to terminate most of the maintenance department, and in the near future, the supply and distribution centre. Meanwhile, there are no less than seven supervisory positions costing approximately $130,000 a year in salaries, to supervise an almost non-existent maintenance and supply division.

Without a proper study being carried out regarding the supply centre warehouse and in spite of a report last year stating that the warehouse "broke even" in operating costs versus "sales" to School District 61 and up-Island schools, the board decided on a "gut feeling" to close down the operation along with 54 other employee positions.

With the closure of the warehouse will go practically all control of stock movement, which in turn will see a stockpiling of supplies in schools, over ordering, more waste, pilferage, damage and consequently higher costs.

Superintendent Allan Stables' concept of zero base budgeting, which requires staff and teachers to order according to their needs rather than their wants, will surely be put to the test during the coming months if costs are to be kept down. With money to send special counsellors away on a paid leave of absence to obtain certification to counsel, and after spending millions on new school buildings whose need was never proven (Spectrum and Lambrick), and spending millions more on upgrading present buildings ($3,970,686), the taxpayer must be excused for being confused as to the board's priorities.

It is to be hoped that the new trustees can apply the brakes before irreparable damage is done to the school district. — Geoffrey Hallam, 1820 Newton Street.

Militant Unions

The demonstration by organized labor to express their concern for the unemployed is as hypocritical as the pre-strike statement: "We don't want to inconvenience the public." Bah! Militant union leaders have caused more lost man-hours through strikes, booking off sick, study sessions at the local pub, picketing and area work stoppages than any other segment of society.

The recent CUPE demand that municipal governments pay students union wages did not add to the work force but lessened the number of students to be hired. It is time unions realized that wages should be based on age, merit and experience. Also, too many inexperienced unemployed expect to start working at affluent wages. If all the slackers both in and out of unions were to go into orbit, there would be ample employment for those who desire a basic human right, the right to work. — Maggi Lynn, 548 Niagara Street.

Nixon Challenged

As a professional forester involved for over 25 years with my company's Queen Charlotte Islands forestry operations, I wish to comment on your story Rayonier Double Talk, (Times, March 9) in which you quote statements made by Robert Nixon, a recent arrival in B.C. Mr. Nixon claims that at a private meeting with Rayonier and Sierra Club representatives we were in favor of a land use study for the whole of the Queen Charlotte Islands, but when asked to request the government for such a study we stated we were not in a position to do so. At this meeting it was pointed out that the government Environment Land Use Committee secretariat was the logical agency to undertake such a resource study and that they had done a preliminary study in 1976. At the time of the meeting with Mr. Nixon this agency was reviewing the Charlotte situation in conjunction with the Skeena Resource Management Committee, with the objective of setting up an appropriate review and study.

Under these circumstances it would be unnecessary and redundant for our company to request a further study (which would be referred back to the same agency). Mr. Nixon inexplicably interprets this as "double talk." In a report to us of this meeting, under his signature, he states: "Mr. McLeod felt that if the secretariat determined the need for further study of the Queen Charlotte Islands, Rayonier would support and participate in such studies." In this regard we have provided this government agency with all requested maps and information.

If there is any double talk it exists between Mr. Nixon's public pronouncements and his communication with us. In his report of the private meeting mentioned this statement is made: "Our meeting was a positive step toward identification of a procedure whereby an integrated resources management plan will be accomplished for the whole of the Queen Charlotte Islands, and the Sierra Club applauds your willingness to participate in discussions with various interest groups."

In his press statement Mr. Nixon attempts to make an issue of the unavailability of information by our company. Our company co-operates fully in providing information for a specific request or project. We do this regularly for universities, for students preparing theses, and others. We never have had such a request from the Sierra Club, yet Mr. Nixon makes those unsubstantiated statements.

As a newcomer here he should understand that TFL operations are totally responsible to the government through the forest service. As a public agency, it has the staff, facilities and responsibilities to provide general and basic forestry information. Justifiably we feel that as a company, it should not be expected or necessary to provide basic and general information that is available from public agencies.

I would hope that in the future Mr. Nixon and the Sierra Club will verify their material before rushing into print with totally false and misleading statements. — D.M. McLeod, Supervisor of Forestry, Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Limited.

First Bill Significant —Gardom

A minor bill asserting the right of the legislative assembly to give precedence to matters other than those expressed by the sovereign was introduced in the legislature Thursday.

An Act to Perpetuate A Parliamentary Right was the first bill presented during the third session of the 31st parliament.

In the preamble Attorney-General Garde Gardom said the act is significant to the democratic process.

"Its introduction prior to consideration of the throne speech perpetuates the established right of parliament, through the representatives elected by the people, to sit and act without leave from the Crown."

Schroeder's Goal To Upgrade House

Harvey Schroeder, the Socred MLA for Chilliwack, was named to the post Thursday after receiving the unanimous support of the house during the opening day of the current session.

Schroeder, deputy speaker of the legislature since 1976, replaces Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River), who resigned Wednesday following a controversy involving his appointment of his girlfriend Barbara Pennock to a position in the auditor-general's office.

Schroeder said his first goal as speaker will be to improve the reputation of the B.C. legislature.

"The house, in its history, has established a sort of high water mark of being one of the unsavory houses of the Dominion," he said in an interview. "I would like to see that upgraded.

"I've said over and over again that we have the finest people in British Columbia.

"The finest people elect from among themselves a representative who must be the best of the finest. Therefore in this house we have every potential to be the best in Canada.

"My goal is to make it that."

Schroeder, 44, was first elected to the legislature in 1972 and will earn $43,000 a year as speaker.

Stephen Rogers (SC—Vancouver South) will replace Schroeder as deputy speaker.

Schroeder was seated next to Smith in the legislative chamber when his nomination was read and received a hearty handshake from the former speaker when the nomination went uncontested.

Housing Corp. Earns $2.2M

The Housing Corporation of B.C. had net earnings of $2.2 million on revenue of $19.2 million during the fiscal year which ended Oct. 31, 1977, says its annual report tabled in the legislature Thursday.

The report says that at the year end, HCBC had assets of $23 million, including $6.3 million in short-term mortgages arising from the sale of projects.

In his report, president W. J. Webb said the first commercial metric housing project in Canada, designed and constructed under the international system of measurement, was completed.

HCBC is wholly-owned by the province, and is responsible for implementation of housing programs as defined by the government.

It also provides project coordination for large-scale land development projects undertaken in support of regional and community growth objectives and programs to help local governments increase the supply of serviced land.

Language Expert Hired By B.C. from Montreal

VANCOUVER (CP — Nick Ardanaz, a Montreal educator who helped design British Columbia's first French immersion elementary school, has been hired by the B.C. education ministry to develop a province-wide system of French instruction for both English- and French- speaking youngsters.

Ardanaz, who now is co-ordinator of second-language instruction in the suburban Montreal school district of Baldwin-Cartier, will help set up French-only programs for B.C.'s French-speaking minority and also expand the immersion program.

The minority language program, which is part of an all-provinces agreement on language rights, will start next fall after the results of a survey on public demand is completed. Ministry officials have said they will consider establishing French language classes where 15 or more students request such instruction.

The immersion program, already under way in Vancouver, Victoria and Coquitlam, is being expanded to other areas.

Deputy Education Minister Walter Hardwick said Thursday Ardanaz will work on a one-year, renewable contract at about $31,000 a year.

He said Ardanaz spent a year in Vancouver setting up L'Ecole Bilingue, which has operated for four years, and last summer conducted teacher-training program in French at Pearson College, near Victoria.

He also is completing a year-long joint project of the B.C. government and the Baldwin-Cartier district to develop a French core curriculum containing the basics of B.C.'s English curriculum. The French curriculum and teaching materials will be available for use in B.C. elementary schools.

PHILLIPS TOPPED TRAVELLERS

Detailed public accounts released Thursday show that Economic Development Minister Don Phillips spent more than any other cabinet minister on travel during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1977.

Phillips spent $13,640 while Health Minister Bob McClelland spent $10,048 and Premier Bill Bennett $9,347.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom spent $6,262, while his former deputy, David Vickers, who left the job last summer, spent almost double that—$12,016.

Argentina Strikes Oil

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The Argentine government has made the first oil strike on its stretch of the South Atlantic continental shelf.

The government oil monopoly, Yacimientos Petroliferos Fiscales, said six different petroleum and gas deposits were found in a well in the Gulf of San Jorge 1,700 kilometres south of Buenos Aires.

Tax Refund Holdbacks Illegal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Firms which buy personal income tax refunds and then hold back 25 per cent of the return from the seller until the cash is paid by Ottawa are breaking the law, Justice R. P. Anderson of the British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

Provincial legislation limits income tax buyers to charging 15 per cent of the seller's return.

Boyd Ferris, counsel for Michael Hanson, B.C. Consumer Protection Act director, who took the court action against Harbour Tax Services Ltd., said the legislation was passed when an investigation showed some discounters charged up to 50 per cent of the value of the expected tax refund.

He said other firms held back as much as 35 per cent of the refund due until the federal income tax department sent the money.

Jack Kowarsky, counsel for Harbour Tax Services, said the firms hold back the additional money beacause of the risks they encounter. He said under the agreement signed between the firm and the seller, the firm must take all losses if the tax refund is incorrect.

He said the act gives the discounters the right to hold back a percentage of the return because it is not known until the tax department clears a refund whether the seller had any right to one in the first place.

Kowarsky said the act is unconstitutional because it purports to deal with interest rates and income tax matters, both of which are the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal government.

FOUR-TIME IMPAIRED DRIVER FINED

SURREY (CP) — George Robert Allan Thomas, 27, of Surrey was fined $1,000 Tuesday for his fourth impaired driving conviction in five years.

Thomas was charged Sept. 29. He had similar convictions in 1973, 1975 and 1977.

Provincial Court Judge Doug Reed told Thomas that if the Crown had proceeded by way of second conviction, he would have gone to jail for at least three months.

Thomas' lawyer told the court that since the Sept. 29 episode his client had abstained from alcohol and was receiving treatment for his problem.

Group Blasts Forced Tips

VANCOUVER (CP) — Don Bellamy, the head of the Restaurant and Foodservices Association of British Columbia, said Thursday that if any more restaurants are found to be adding a compulsory tip to the bill, they'll be kicked out of the association.

Bellamy said compulsory tipping began earlier this month with five Vancouver restaurants adding a 15 per cent service charge to the bill. He refused to disclose the names of the restaurants saying they had all agreed to withdraw the policy.

"We don't support mandatory tipping in any way, shape or form, said Bellamy. I've already stomped on them and it's under control."

He said he had received five written complaints about the must-tip policy and estimated "50 to 100 more probably suffered in silence."

The B.C. Hotels' Association has also issued a statement condeming the compulsory tipping policy in restaurants but association president Ken Noble said the condemnation did not apply to hotels who include a compulsory tip for banquets.

Bellamy said he was opposed to the banquet service charge. "If they have to charge for service it should be included in the price of meal," he said.

WCB to Probe Alcan

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Workers Compensation Board announced Thursday that it will conduct an independent evaluation of a controversial health study done on workers at the Alcan aluminium smelter in Kitimat.

In letters to Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. and the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers (CASAW), WCB chairman Dr. Adam Little cited union-management disagreement as the reason why the board's proposal for a tripartite panel had been dropped.

The initial results of the study funded by CASAW, were released last November, and the board commissioned several experts to review it.

The majority felt that the initial report did not contain sufficient detail to allow for proper evaluation of health problems in the community.

Among other problems, the report said a new type of respiratory disease was showing up in smelter workers.

BAY BURNED IN OVEN DRAW

BURNABY (CP) — A man who thought he had won a microwave oven in a draw at a Bay department store says nothing's cooking in the prize department.

David Austen of New Westminster entered the store Tuesday night with his wife and some friends, and was handed a ticket which won the grand prize — a microwave oven — in a draw.

But the Bay says Austen was not eligible.

John Hansen, manager of the Bay outlet, said the store was closed at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, then re-opened between 6 and 9 p.m. for employees in appreciation of their work during a hectic Bay Day sale.

Security guards were on duty, he said, but did not recognize all staff members so that some members of public, like Austen's party, were able to get in.

When it was determined that Austen did not work for the Bay, another ticket was drawn.

"I explained to the customer that it was a private party, and that he crashed it though not intentionally," said Hansen.

Teachers Told to Fight Against Racism

VANCOUVER (CP) — The battle against racism must be fought by every teacher in British Columbia, a member of the B.C. Teachers' Federation task force on racism said Wednesday.

Gary Onstad, a Burnaby teacher, told the BCTF's annual meeting that "racism must be the concern of all teachers in this province."

"We must recognize there's a long, hard road ahead, and prejudice, bigotry and racism will not be erased overnight."

"Silence on social issues, on racism, is often taken to mean you condone it," he added.

Onstad said there seems to be a "speak, hear and see-no-evil" approach to racism in B.C.

"It amounts to this: if we deny the existence of racism, maybe it will go away," he said.

He was referring to the BCTF's slide-tape presentation on racism, banned last year by Surrey and Langley school boards, which illustrates examples of racial discrimination in B.C.'s history.

Surrey and Langley banned the presentation because the school boards said they believed it brings up a "negative past."

Onstad said the presentation has had widespread use throughout B.C., and has been supported by native and ethnic organizations and other groups.

The task force also recommended that school boards and the ministry of education develop an equal employment policy.

Task force coordinator Wes Knapp said the recommendation is aimed at giving people from minority groups equal consideration in educational jobs, and does not call for a quota of employees from multicultural backgrounds.

The delegates also urged school boards to ensure that all students take sewing, cooking, and woodworking courses.

Lynda Copelin said most schools steer girls into sewing courses, and boys into mechanics.

Policeman Fined $200 for Assault

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police constable Donald Dyck was fined $200 in provincial court Thursday after being found guilty of assaulting a Surrey man last June.

Judge Nick Friesen said he found Dyck's conduct inconsistent and irrational during an off-duty confrontation with John Crang, 21.

Judge Friesen said police are in a "special position of trust in the community" and refused a request that Dyck be given an conditional discharge.

Court was told during the trial that Crang left his home in suburban Surrey June 18 to pick up his brother. He was following Dyck's pickup truck when the truck stopped for several minutes at a railway crossing. He testified that he attempted to pass, but Dyck kept him in the passing lane by first accelerating and then braking.

Crang managed to edge in behind the truck and both vehicles came to a halt. Dyck and Constable Patrick Meikle, his partner on the Vancouver force, got out of the truck, in which there also were two females, and Dyck walked back to Crang's car.

Dyck kicked in the driver's window, cutting Crang's arm and shoulder, the judge said in his verdict. Crang made no gestures nor had he said anything to anyone at this stage.

He got out of his car and tried to calm Dyck and Meikle down. Dyck shoved Crang against the car and Crang hit his elbow.

"Both Dyck and Meikle were screaming and swearing at Crang in angry and mean voices," the judge found.

Dyck testified that he kicked at the car in a reflex action when he saw it lurch toward him and his partner. Both were dressed in civilian clothes. He said he stopped because Crang was tailgating, but didn't tell Crang they were off-duty police officers.

Dyck said that he and Meikle had been drinking beer four or five hours before the incident.

"I was not impressed with the evidence of the defence witnesses," said Judge Friesen.

"Dyck and Meikle left the scene when it was their clear duty, as trained policemen, to remain when they knew police had been called.

Dyck, 27, a dogmaster and member of the force for 3½ years, is also charged with criminal negligence causing death in connection with a car crash on Christmas Eve.

ALTA. LURES B.C. BUYERS

FERNIE (CP) — A British Columbia Chamber of Commerce member said here Wednesday that the provincial government's seven per cent sales tax is driving southeastern B.C. consumers to Alberta.

The Alberta government's recent decision to drop their provincial sales tax on gasoline will make the short drive across the border even more attractive, said Gus Boersma, East Kootenay representative of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce.

Boersma said Cranbrook businessmen were concerned that the removal of gas tax in Alberta, combined with the seven per cent B.C. sales tax, would encourage people from the Fernie-Sparwood area to shop in Lethbridge rather than in southeastern B.C.

Boersma said he will state the case for the removal of the sales tax at a B.C. Chamber of Commerce meeting in Vancouver this weekend.

Suspect Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police confirmed Thursday that a man was being held in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in connection with December's gangland-style shooting of a man who was to testify in a trial against a gang of art thieves.

Police said Michel Tremblay, 29, of Montreal was arrested Wednesday in Fort Lauderdale and is being held in connection with the Dec. 9 slaying of Ferdinand Maria Voorn, shot four times in broad daylight outside a downtown Vancouver apartment building.

Voorn, 29, was shot in the head and chest with a .22-calibre pistol in an alley behind the apartment building. Witnesses said two men did the shooting.

A police spokesman said Thursday that extradition proceedings will begin to return Tremblay to Canada after U.S. immigration officials complete their own investigation.

After Voorn's death, Montreal police confirmed he was to be the Crown's chief witness in the February trial of a group of men charged with conspiring to steal works of art from Canada's largest private art gallery.

Voorn also was charged and was to be tried for conspiracy to steal art valued at $750,000 to $1 million.

$160,487 FOR INJURIES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Evered Lyle Campbell, 54, was awarded $160,487 damages Thursday by Justice A. A. Mackoff for injuries he received in Nelson Jan. 30, 1976 when he was struck by a motor vehicle.

He suffered a fractured pelvis, an injured shoulder and other injuries and will be unable to return to his former job as a Class One warehouseman.

B.C. Tel Urged To Promote Women

VANCOUVER (CP) — Women should make up half of British Columbia Telephone Co.'s board of directors, an employee-shareholder told the company's annual meeting Thursday.

"About half the employees are women, half our customers are probably women, and I suggest that possibly half our shareholders are women," said Ken Jones, a B.C. Tel engineering technician.

Jones also said a greater balance of board representation would be achieved by having younger people and more employee-shareholders on the board.

G.F. MacFarlane, company chairman and chief executive officer, said the company should be looking for changes where appropriate but the 11 board members elected at the meeting were men.

MacFarlane also said that new technology will not endanger jobs, and that the firm is introducing an employee job-training program.

Meanwhile, the responsibility of appointing a chairman to a joint committee to study a dispute centred on contracting-out of work at B.C. Tel will be left to Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Supreme Court.

Company spokesman Keith Matthews said Wednesday that union and management representatives were unable to agree on a candidate to head the committee, so the decision will be left to the judge, a condition in a contract that ended an 81-day strike at B.C. Tel earlier this year.

The company's demand for more freedom to contract-out work assignments was the main issue which prompted the strike.

As previously reported, B.C. Tel had a profit of $29 million, or $1.54 a share in 1977, compared with $27.79 million, or $1.48 a share in 1976. Revenue rose 15 per cent to $501.55 million.

TEAMSTERS TO VOTE THIRD TIME

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teamster Union members are to vote this weekend on a proposed contract with 97 British Columbia cartage firms, the third contract offer to be voted on during current negotiations.

Two previous packages were rejected by 4,000 members of Locals 31 and 213, but in both cases only about 800 employees voted.

Local 31 members will vote at meetings Saturday and Sunday, while voting by Local 213 members, scattered throughout the province, will take longer.

Local 31 president Doug McLeod, who criticized earlier poor turnouts, said members will be voting this time on a one-year contract containing a wage increase of six per cent, the maximum permitted under federal anti-inflation guidelines.

"That's what they were hollering for when they turned down the last agreement," he said.

He would not give further contract details, and said there will not be an official recommendation from the negotiating committee on the proposed settlement.

"Each individual on the committee is subject to his own conscience as to whether he recommends it or not," he said.

The union agreed to present the terms to the membership following meetings during the past month with Transport Labor Relations Association, which represents the cartage firms. Also involved in the meetings were federal mediator Mike Collins and provincial mediator Jack Waterston.

CREDIT UNION ASSETS UP BY 52.9%

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver City Savings Credit Union, Canada's largest credit union, increased its assets by 52.9 per cent, or $180.6 million in 1977 to $522 million, the company said in its annual report released Thursday.

Membership increased to 88,115 compared to 67,352 the previous year and members' savings increased 48.1 per cent to $485.1 million from $327.5 million in 1976.

Net earnings for the year before deducting the share dividend and income tax payments were $5.6 million or 12.6 per cent of total income. This was an increase of $1.5 million compared to 1976.

Jail Boss Never Got Pay Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Marie Peacock told a public inquiry Thursday into conditions in provincial jails for women that she has not received any money of the $175-a-month raise she was promised three months ago when she was appointed director of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla) women's prison.

Ms. Peacock said the salary hike should have turned up on her January pay cheque a month after she was transferred from the corrections service training division to the women's prison Dec. 5, 1977, in a management shakeup ordered by Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

The promotion was to have raised her salary to $1,850 a month.

She told the Justice Patricia Proudfoot, inquiry commissioner, that there is too much bureaucracy in the corrections service.

She also said that when she took on her new job as director, the inventory of supplies and equipment at the jail was inadequate.

"When I arrived I wondered why a few of the prisoners were wearing pajamas all day," said Ms. Peacock. "I was told that they didn't have their own clothes and that the institution didn't have any for them."

The inquiry continues.

Drug Eyed For Hearts

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A drug commonly prescribed for gout could save many persons from having a second heart attack, the New England Journal of Medicine reports.

The drug anturane can reduce by half the number of fatal strokes among persons who have suffered previous heart attacks.

Report Traces Ownership

OTTAWA (CP) — A new directory detailing ownership entanglements of many of the country's largest companies was released Thursday by Statistics Canada.

The report, Inter-Corporate Ownership, shows that the group headed by Montreal businessman Paul G. Desmarais controls more than 175 corporations including such giants as Power Corporation of Canada, Canada Steamship Lines, Investors Group, Montreal Trust, Bathurst Paper, Consolidated Bathurst and Voyageur Colonial.

The three volumes also provide detailed charts of corporate connections of a selected groups of large companies such as the K. C. Irving family of New Brunswick, Canadian Pacific Ltd., C. B. S. Inc., Rothmans, Argus Corp., W. Garfield Weston Charitable Foundation and International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

It notes that the Weston group, including 150 firms, now is considered foreign-owned since Canadian-born Garfield Weston has taken out British citizenship.

The volume was compiled to provide government with tools needed to analyse the effects of foreign investment and corporate concentration in Canada, Statistics Canada said.

The book traces ownership of companies back to the ultimate owners, while considering effects of options and interlocking directorships in determining control.

Information is primarily based upon non-confidential returns filed by Canadian companies with the government and through international publications.

The new publication is the first of its kind from the government since 1972.

Ex-Mayor Weeps At Inquiry

SOREL, Que. (CP) — The former mayor of this town wept at the organized crime inquiry Thursday as he described his dealings with prominent local businessman Marcel Salvail, said by police to be Sorel's crime boss.

Jean-Jacques Poliquin, his voice quavering, told the inquiry that Salvail led him to almost lose a major investment as a result of a deal to buy a pub in a large shopping mall in east-end Montreal.

Salvail has been the centre of attention of this session of public hearings by the Quebec police commission inquiry, which began Wednesday in this industrial town, 70 kilometres northeast of Montreal.

Officials of the inquiry say they are using the Salvail case to show organized crime exists outside such traditional centres as Montreal.

The diminutive Poliquin, who served as Sorel mayor from 1964 to 1968, told the inquiry Salvail offered him a partnership with another man in the $300,000 pub in 1976.

Poliquin said Salvail did all the hiring, appointing as manager a man with a long criminal record.

Money from pub revenues began disappearing mysteriously, he said, and the manager attracted the wrong kind of business— "people who didn't work regularly and who had records."

Poliquin said he and a partner later managed to buy out Salvail's share in the pub for $56,000, as well as carrying the burden of at least $100,000 in bank loans.

He hinted that since then his family had been threatened and said he has taken to carrying a gun.

"If you lived through what I lived through, then you would get a gun permit too," he said, breaking into tears.

The inquiry was told Salvail ran organized crime activities in Sorel with a firm hand and had links with criminal activity in Montreal.

To obtain liquor permits for some 16 bars and pubs—which he could not hold because of his criminal record—he used fronts, including his 63-year-old father, inquiry lawyer Gontran Chamard said.

Family Tax Reform Urged to Aid Poor

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A federally-appointed body has called for reform of the income tax system to provide income supplement for the working poor.

The National Council of Welfare, which advises Welfare Minister Monique Begin, said in a report issued Thursday that Canada could provide a tax credit of as much as $500 per child at no additional cost to taxpayers.

The council called for merger of the family allowances program, in a new scheme, with the dependents' exemptions and children's credit in the income tax.

All three schemes are basically income support programs for families with children, the council said.

Family allowances provide a taxable benefit of $25.68 a month for each child under 18. The dependents' exemption excludes from income tax $460 for each child under 16 and $840 for dependents 16 or over. The children's credit provides a reduction in federal income tax of up to $59 per child.

Cost of the family allowance program currently is $2.226 billion, but about $584 million will be recovered because the allowances are taxable income. The next cost f family allowances will be some $1.642 billion this year.

The dependents' exemption will cost $880 million in lost tax revenue and the children's deduction will cost another $275 million.

The council criticized this total expenditure of $2.8 billion because "low-income families with the greatest need receive the smallest benefits, and highest-income families with least need get most."

The report said that the combined effect of the three programs at the present time is to give a family with two children and a "poverty income" of $7,000 or less a year $616. A family of the same size with an income of $25,000 a year gets close to $1,000 in benefits.

The three programs should be replaced by a single "diminishing tax credit."

This would give $500 per child annually to poor families and $300 per child to families at the top of the income scale.

The council claimed that by careful selection of the income level at which the credit starts to diminish, full benefits could be assured to all poor families. The report put at 3,000,000 the number of poor persons in Canada.

It said the tax credit could be distributed across Canada through monthly cheques of $25 per child.

Dredge Fraud Trial Recesses

TORONTO (CP) — The fraud-conspiracy trial involving federal government dredging contracts adjourned Thursday for two weeks.

The trial began seven weeks ago and is expected to last another six months.

Mr. Justice William Parker of the Ontario Supreme Court adjourned the trial because several lawyers involved in the case are embarking on a trip to Israel sponsored by the Advocates Society.

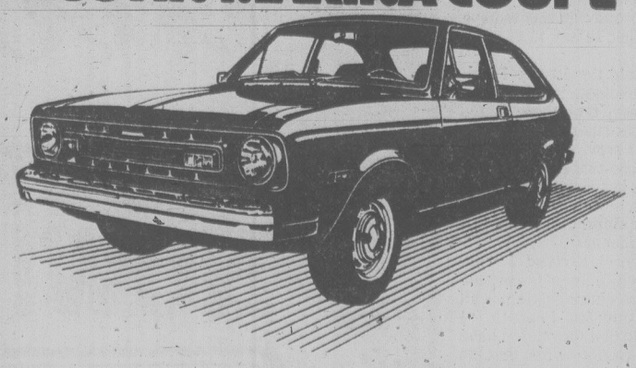

The only witness heard at the trial so far has been Horace Grant Rindress, 51, former president of the Montreal based J. P. Porter Co. Ltd.

When the trial adjourned, Rindress was still under cross examination by defence lawyers.

Best, Insulin Co-Founder, Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Biocnemist Dr. Charles Herbert Best, co-discoverer of insulin to treat diabetes and one of the world's most honored medical researchers, died today in hospital.

A spokesman for Toronto General Hospital said Dr. Best was admitted to hospital on Sunday and underwent surgery for a ruptured abdominal artery and removal of undissolved material in his bloodstream.

Semi-retired, he celebrated his 79th birthday on Feb. 27.

In recent years, he spent much of his time speaking around the world to encourage research on diabetes and related diseases.

In 1967, he retired as director of the Banting and Best department of medical research at the University of Toronto and gave up his duties as a teacher in the university's physiology department.

Dr. Best and Dr. Frederick Banting, a surgeon from London, Ont., who died in a 1941 plane crash, were responsible for the development in 1921 of insulin to control diabetes. Dr. Banting was knighted in 1934 for his achievement.

Asked once whether the two scientists ever had doubts or feared failure, Dr. Best replied:

"Never. You know it was just like fighting a war. You never think of yourself getting it, or of losing. You just have to win."

Despite their achievement, Dr. Best looked forward to the day when the life-saving substance would be obsolete.

"Insulin was a breakthrough in the fight against diabetes," he said last year.

"Since then, great progress has been made. I'm sure other discoveries will be made until a cure is found and insulin is no longer necessary."

Before the insulin discovery at a University of Toronto laboratory, sufferers of diabetes, faced a lingering, wasting illness which eventually ended in death.

Diabetes prevents the body from digesting sugar and other carbohydrates but a daily dose of insulin allows diabetics to live full and normal lives. About 30 million people in the world take insulin.

★

A seventh-generation Canadian whose ancestors arrived in Halifax with Governor Cornwallis in 1749, he attended the University of Toronto for an undergraduate science degree.

On May 17, 1921, Dr. Banting strode into the physiology department and outlined his belief that something in the pancreas of animals could be used, if properly extracted, to alleviate diabetes.

Prof. J. J. R. MacLeod, head of the department, offered to lend Dr. Banting a small laboratory and an associate with sound knowledge of physiological and biochemical research techniques.

"You can have Charlie," MacLeod said.

The two scientists retired to the poorly-ventilated laboratory for the summer, spending many nights cooking rudimentary meals over bunsen burners and sleeping on cots beside their experimental equipment.

Besides his personal interest in the disease — an aunt had died of it — Best was noted for his relentless determination and imaginative curiosity.

Scientists had discovered that removal of the pancreas in animals caused severe diabetes. But the problem involved extraction of what was a hypothetical internal secretion — assumed to be a hormone — from the pancreas to administer it to diabetics.

The theory that insulin could reduce the percentage of sugar in the blood and urine was not entirely new.

Dr. Banting and Dr. Best succeeded when they tied off pancreatic ducts of dogs and extracted the accumulation of the partly-degenerated pancreas about two months later. This was purified and administered to other dogs artifically made diabetic.

"We were overwhelmed by a multitude of ideas which demanded investigation but we persisted until on 75 occasions, without any failures, we secured a material potent in lowering blood sugar," Dr. Best wrote later.

Dr. Banting and Dr. Best turned the patent papers over to the university for $1, stipulating that no royalties be charged for the manufacture of insulin.

In 1923, Dr. Banting and Prof. MacLeod were awarded the Nobel Prize for Medicine. Dr. Banting immediately shared his half of the prize with Dr. Best.

MacLeod said later he won not for the "discovery of insulin but for my discovery of Best."

University Gifts Drop

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Institute of Donations and Public Affairs Research says businessmen are reducing donations to universities because they feel professors do not teach enough to earn their salaries and some graduates cannot read or write proper English or French.

Richard Hopkinson told a seminar on universities Thursday that donations by corporations to education dropped to 26 cents of each corporate dollar donated in 1976 from 37 cents in 1971.

Hopkinson also said other beneficiaries are competing for corporate donations.

Peter Swann, chairman of the institute, said the public "is not so much sharpening the knives and looking for cutbacks but, like hard-pressed, good consumers, it is looking for value for money—and with due respect one wonders if many think they are getting it."

Wayne Gartley, president of the University and College Placement Association, said an increasing number of students have doubts about the value of university education.

Gartley said surveys show that more than 60 per cent of university students attend to get a better job but few will be able to do so.

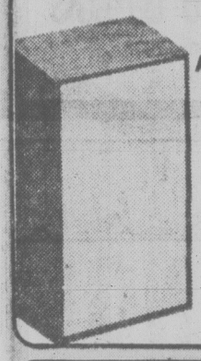

In the last 10 years, the number of students going on to post-secondary education has doubled to 70 per cent from 35 per cent, he said.

"Most of our employer ratio of blue-collar to white-collar workers has not changed significantly in the last 10 years," Gartley said.

Concert To Aid Students

A chamber music evening with a special purpose will be presented by faculty members at the University of Victoria's MacLaurin Building auditorium Saturday evening.

The players will be Paul Kling and Susan Eddlemon, violins; Jaroslav Karlovsky, viola; Linda Hougland-Daniels, cello, and Ethan Sloane, clarinet.

The quintet will perform Hugo Wolf's Italian Serenade, a Mozart Quintet for clarinet and strings, and Debussy's exquisite String Quartet, Op.10.

The purpose of the concert, says Kling, who is head of the Music Department's string section, is to found a string scholarship fund so that the department may offer outstanding students an opportunity to come to Victoria for further study.

"This will be of great benefit to everyone concerned and reflect very well on the UVic music department," Kling points out.

Proceeds of the $3 admission price ($2 for students and senior citizens) will be devoted to the fund.

Kling says that he hopes the scholarship benefit concert will be come a regular event — "at least one performance a year for this purpose."

The concert begins at 8 p.m.

Hair in Toque 'Similar' to Accused's

An expert in hair and fibre analysis told a county court armed robbery trial Thursday that hair from an accused man was "similar" to hair found in a toque.

Dorothy Clark, who works in the RCMP crime detection laboratory in Vancouver, was testifying in the third day of the trial of Harold Trevor Hughes, 30, and Roger Lindal, 39, accused of robbing James Bay Inn desk clerk Walter Scott at knifepoint Sept. 1. He said two men with toques over their heads robbed him of $114.70.

Clark said she examined two toques, entered as court exhibits, and found four human scalp hairs in one toque "similar" to a sample of Hughes' hair and 12 hairs from the other toque which were dissimilar.

Fibre found in the bathroom of a James Bay apartment by police appeared to contain fibres similar to both toques, she said.

Under cross-examination, she agreed she could not state whether the odds are one in 10 or one in 10,000 that the bathroom fibres came from the toques.

The trial was to conclude today with Judge Montague Drake's address to the jury.

Suspended

Patrick Thomas Doyle, 28, was given a suspended sentence in Victoria county court Wednesday and placed on probation for six months by Judge E. J. C. Stewart after pleading guilty to possession of someone else's credit card March 19 knowing it to have been obtained by a criminal offence.

An open and shut case for Malibu Wagon.

When we designed the new Malibu Wagon, we did more than make it smaller and lighter. We opened up the back in a whole new way. A new two-piece tailgate means that even if someone is parked up to your bumper, you can still open the top half to load or unload. A 4' x 8' piece of plywood, or any extra-long object is easily carried without lowering the tailgate. For shorter loads, you can use the bottom half of the tailgate as a loading platform, and use the top half to keep out of the weather if you're loading on a stormy day.

Go ahead, keep loading. The Malibu Wagon may deceive you with its smaller look but it has a generous 72.4 cubic feet of cargo space plus standard storage compartments on both sides and under the floor.

Want more practicality? A compact V-6 engine with available automatic transmission that delivers 37 km/gal. city, 51 km/gal. highway, 42 km/gal. combined based on approved Transport Canada test methods. (Remember these fuel economy figures are estimates which may be subject to revision. The actual fuel economy you get will vary depending on the driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition, and available equipment.)

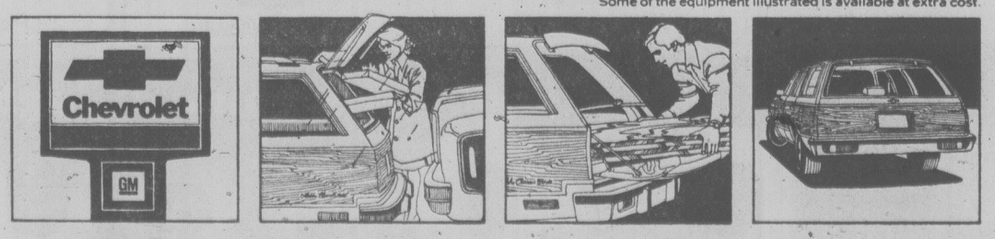

The dashboard is divided into functional sections for easy servicing. The two-level power ventilation system delivers cool air at face level, warm air to your feet. It combines with rear vent windows that swing open to draw fresh air through the wagon, even when stopped.

For all its practicality, Malibu Wagon holds its own in comfort and style. A roomy passenger area combines with special sound-absorbing insulation for a quiet, comfortable ride. In engineering, styling, roominess and efficiency, Malibu can offer the resale value people traditionally look for in GM cars.

These are just some of the reasons why we believe Malibu Wagon should be your next wagon. Discover the others in a test drive. Case closed.

Shrunken Trudeaudough Replaces Skidding Dollar

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — During the 1962 election when the Canadian dollar was devalued to 92½ cents the Liberals circulated the Diefendollar or Diefenbuck.

Now there is the diddledollar or Trudeaudough.

It is circulating in Vancouver and was brought to the nation's capital by a member of the parliamentary press gallery returning to Ottawa from the west coast.

With the Canadian dollar slumping in value to under 85 cents U.S. it was inevitable, especially with a general election expected in June.

The diddledollar or Trudeaudough has been marked down in value to 88 cents, with previous highs of 89 cents and 90 cents scratched out.

The fake currency is from the Bunko of Canada. Or in very loose French "Banque De Valued"

They bear the notation "one hole dollar". There's a reminder that the "Diddledollar will not float. Avoid strong currencies."

At one end there is a detachable coupon offering 12 cents off with a reminder to remit 46 per cent of the remainder to the government of your choice.

Distributed by a Vancouver firm the fake currency poking fun at Prime Minister Trudeau's economic and monetary policies was being handed out at the West Coast city.

The company describes diddledollars as a "joy to own, a shrewd investment in these times of skyrocketing prices for bathroom tissue and a lasting historic memento of the days when governments fiddled and the economy was "diddled."

Firm Has Estuary Access

Island Shake and Shingle Ltd. has bought a 39-acre farm which would provide rail access if the company is permitted to build a mill on the Cowichan estuary.

The farm, with a declared value of $160,000, is in the name of company president Herb Rodenbush and his partner, Norm Rooke.

The company is one of five seeking to develop industries on the estuary. The other four are Doman Industries, B.C. Forest Products, Hidden Valley Sawmills and Western Energy.

The provincial government has launched a study on whether development should be permitted there and has not yet reached a decision.

Island Shake and Shingle has also purchased another piece of property in the district, a 1.4-acre farm, from Patrick Rogers, executive assistant to provincial Health Minister Robert McClelland. Declared value of the Rogers farm is $85,000.

The company said the Rogers farm does not have any links with proposed industrial development but might be subdivided in a residential project.

PWA Unions Disagree

The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Local 1500, decided Thursday to withdraw its support for the Canadian Air Line Employees Association in its dispute with Pacific Western Airlines.

IAMAW spokesmen said in Vancouver the leadership of CALEA had gone back on an agreement made last week in which both unions agreed to return their jobs with no conditions set upon a return to work.

The union said PWA officials responded to demands that bargaining be resumed today and that CALEA members return to work.

CALEA officials were not immediately available for comment.

Record Enrolment Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kindergarten enrolment in the United States declined by the largest amount on record this school year, the Census Bureau said Thursday.

In a survey of education, the bureau said the number of children attending kindergarten fell to 3.2 million from 3.5 million, almost entirely because of a drop in the birth rate five years earlier.

Since the bureau began keeping enrolment records 30 years ago, kindergarten enrolment has dropped only three times. The biggest previous decline was 128,000 in 1972.

A total of 60 million persons under age 35 were attending school in October, a decline of 482,000 from the year before.

"The population of five-year-olds decreased about eight per cent between 1976 and 1977 as did kindergarten enrolment, reflecting the large drop in the number of births five years earlier," the report said.

Among other education trends found in the October, 1977, survey:

—College enrolment of people under 35 remained about 10.2 million. Enrolment of college freshmen increased by about 300,000 after a comparable drop the previous year;

—Elementary school enrolment dropped to 29.2 million from 29.8 million in the last year;

—High school enrolment was unchanged in October at 15.7 million.

China Eases Exit Rules for Citizens

HONG KONG (AP) — A Communist newspaper says permission has been granted for a group of people in Canton to visit relatives in Canada, pending clearance from Canadian authorities.

The Chinese-language Wen Wei Po, in a dispatch from Canton, capital of Kwangtung province bordering Hong Kong, does not say how many persons are involved.

The newspaper also reports that China has simplified application procedures for citizens wishing to visit or settle abroad. It says they can apply directly to various security units without going through their communes or production units.

The report says China permits persons with close relatives including parents, spouses and children in foreign countries to leave China to visit them, and to settle abroad if they can find jobs.

The reported decision to allow Chinese to leave the country follows a call for permission for overseas Chinese to return for visits or settlement.

Overseas Chinese are those born abroad or of long foreign residence.

Blood Clots Dissolved

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A new drug said to dissolve serious blood clots in the lungs — an illness that kills 200,000 in the United States annually — was introduced Thursday by Abbott Laboratories, a major pharmaceutical firm.

An Abbott spokesman said the new drug, urokinase, will enable physicians to treat pulmonary embolism without surgery and more effectively than with anti-coagulant drugs.

The drug works by converting an inactive substance in the blood into plasmin, an enzyme that breaks down the protein that is the essential part of blood clots.

The spokesman said urokinase can dissolve clots, while heparin, an anti-coagulant commonly used to treat pulmonary embolism, only prevents formation of new clots.

Guerrillas Would Kill Smith: Mugabe

LONDON (Reuter) — Black Rhodesian guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe has vowed that white Prime Minister Ian Smith would be shot if he was caught by the guerrillas, Mozambique's official radio reported Thursday.

The radio, monitored here, said Mugabe, co-leader of the militant Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, made the statement in a magazine interview to be published next month.

Zimbabwe is the black African name for Rhodesia.

The radio broadcast reported that Mugabe said in the interview that "If we find Smith alive when we take power, he will be tried by a people's court and will be shot."

He said Smith and his immediate collaborators are war criminals.

In a free Zimbabwe, Mugabe was reported to have added, land must belong to the state but white farmers might have a role with no special privileges alongside black farmers.

13 Killed In Rioting

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Thirteen people were killed in rioting between Hindus and Moslems Wednesday and the bodies of nine of the dead were burned by a mob, a government official said Thursday.

The clashes took place in the Moradabad district, north of New Delhi, the chief minister of the state of Uttar Pradesh, Ram Naresh Yadav, told the state parliament in Lucknow.

He said that 21 people were seriously injured, four critically.

VW Rabbit Best on Gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has issued its final listing of gasoline mileage figures for 1978 model year autos, and the results show the Volkswagen Rabbit provides the best fuel economy.

The Rabbit posted 40 miles a gallon in city driving and 53 miles a gallon on the highway for an over-all average of 45 m.p.g. The figures are based on a U.S. gallon which equals four-fifths of a Canadian gallon.

The Honda Civic, which was rated No. 1 in 1977, achieved 36 m.p.g. in city driving and 44 m.p.g. on the highway for a combined average of 40 m.p.g.

The only other auto to achieve an average of 40 m.p.g. or more was the Datsun B210, which averaged 36 m.p.g. in city driving and 48 m.p.g. on the highway.

The only surprise in the list was Volkswagen's triumph over Honda. The Volkswagen mileage figures had been released in September, when the EPA published a list that included most cars sold in the United States. The Honda mileage figures came in the latest addition to the listing. The addition, released Monday, included cars not previously tested.

The mileage figure list is likely to be the last published by the government in the current form. The EPA is studying new procedures to rank autos because the agency and its critics agree that the mileage figures do not reflect actual driving conditions.

Most car owners, studies have found, do not achieve the levels reported in the tests. Gasoline mileage can be as much as 14 per cent less, the EPA said.

However, the EPA says the studies are valid for comparative purposes. The agency says that an average driver can expect to get twice the fuel economy from a car averaging 20 m.p.g. compared with one averaging 10 m.p.g.

The auto tests are conducted under laboratory-controlled conditions by professional drivers using a test instrument. The city test simulates a 7.5-mile stop-and-go drive at an average speed of 20 miles an hour. The highway test simulates a 10-mile non-stop trip averaging 50 m.p.h.

RESHUFFLE IN FRANCE

PARIS (AP) — Premier Raymond Barre and his government resigned today in the traditional post-election reshuffle, but he is expected to be renamed soon to form a new government.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing asked Barre to return to the Elysee Palace at 6 p.m. Saturday. Political sources said Barre then will be asked to choose a new team.

The centre-right coalition won 291 of the National Assembly's 491 seats in a double-elimination election March 12 and 19.

Tokyo Airport Opening Advanced to Mid-May

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Japanese cabinet decided today to open Tokyo's controversial new international airport at Narita in mid-May, a government spokesman said.

But the setting of a specific date was held over until another cabinet meeting next Tuesday because of a lack of effective security measures to defend the $2.6-billion airport from continued left-wing attacks, he said.

Premier Takeo Fukuda said he is determined to strengthen security at the airport, the opening of which was cancelled on Tuesday following a weekend attack that wrecked the control tower.

The national police agency said it will ask the airport authority to tighten security at Narita, being guarded around-the-clock by nearly 14,000 riot police.

The measures will include setting up a potentially lethal high-voltage electrified wire fence around the whole perimeter.

'WHOOPEE' HE CRIED, AND FELL 29 FLOORS

SAN FRANCISCO — Harold Brown, who plunged 29 storeys down a skyscraper air shaft at a speed of up to 160 kilometres an hour, shouting "Whoopee" all the way, was reported resting today in a hospital — "alert, pleasant and asking for water."

The 22-year-old Brown broke his thighbones, kneecaps and a heelbone but suffered no internal injuries during the escapade Wednesday night at the landmark 48-storey Transamerica pyramid building. Police said Brown burst past a security guard at the building, calling out "I've been sent by God." He made his way to the stairwell which parallels the building's ventilation shaft.

Brown sprinted to the 32nd floor as a guard raced after him. Police taking an elevator later spotted Brown on the 29th floor. Security guard Michael Silveira said Brown was shinnying down a pipe. Brown muttered a profanity, spat at witnesses, said goodbye and let go.

BOSTON — A spokesman for Massachusetts General Hospital today would neither confirm nor deny reports that actor John Wayne will undergo heart surgery for replacement of an aorta valve. A Boston television station, WNAC-TV, says the actor will undergo the operation Saturday morning. The station says Dr. Mortimer Buckley, a heart specialist at MGH, will do the operation.

SANTA FE, N.M. — A state judge has awarded up to $75,000 to a worker from the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory who claims he was disabled by a neurotic fear that radiation would kill him. Lawyers on both sides of the case involving 57-year-old Ramon Martinez said the ruling could have wide implications for the nuclear industry, because the award was based solely on mental anxiety, not on any demonstrable physical harm. A spokesman for Los Alamos, the laboratory about 65 kilometres northwest of here where the first atomic bomb was developed, said no decision had been made about an appeal.

. . . And One Tiny Insect

MINNEAPOLIS — A man who opened a cold capsule to investigate an advertised claim that it contained "600 tiny time pills" has filed suit against the manufacturer on grounds that his discovery of an insect in the capsule made him paranoid about taking pills.

Patrick Foslien seeks $50,000 in damages from the maker of Contac in a Hennepin District Court suit. His suit says he was about to take one of the capsules in 1976 when he decided to open it and study it.

He found a hole in the side of the capsule and a tiny insect among the contents, the suit says.

He forwarded the insect to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which identified it as a click beetle, the suit says.

Ever since, Foslien says, he has been paranoid about taking pills.

Century. A Buick like you've never seen before.

How Buick Science works Magic for you.

In redefining the full-size Buick successfully for last year, Buick discovered how science, and a little magic, could help reshape the mid-size Buick for this year.

Again, Buick was after "efficiency", without in any way losing sight of the prestige and luxury that's always been a Buick tradition. And always will be.

The Century Custom Sedan, above, is over a foot shorter and hundreds of pounds lighter than last year's counterpart. It's a leaner, neater Buick with an expensive, European look, a slantback design that is not only highly contemporary but is a logical body style for the future. It's what can happen when designers and engineers merge their ambitions to meet new goals in a changing world.

Look at Century's new mileage numbers. Fuel economy estimates with the standard 3.2 litre V6 and available automatic transmission are 35 km/g in city tests, 51 km/g highway and 41 kilometres per gallon, or 25 miles per gallon in combined city and highway tests*. A bit of Buick wizardry.

While Century is in great shape outside, usable room inside has been maintained. Or even improved, in significant measurements like front and rear head room and leg room over last year's model. Such things as shell front seat construction, a longer "travel" for front seat adjustment, moving the instrument panel forward, and recessing the rear armrests, all contribute to ample passenger room for six people.

Even trunk capacity, aided by the use of a new compact spare tire, has been increased to over 16 cubic feet.

The sheer magic of the resized Century is clear the minute you take the wheel. The new size and weight, the new chassis and suspension, help make Century easier to manoeuver in city traffic, easier to park, and more fun to drive.

There are seven new Coupes and Sedans and two new station wagons. The wagons have a standard 3.8 litre V6, all Century models offer an optional V8, and all have the comfort, quality and richness that's second nature to Buick.

*Based on approved Transport Canada test methods. The actual fuel economy you get will vary according to the kind of driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition, and available equipment.

point during the debate in the senate: "I can only say that when the guidelines become law they should apply with equal force to everybody covered by them."

During 1976, when the senator received his own staggering pay raise, most other Canadian workers, including members of his own union, were limited to an annual raise of eight per cent, or a maximum of $2,400.

Under terms of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, passed by the U.S. Congress in 1959, every major union in the U.S. must annually file with the department of labor a complete financial statement, disclosing wages and other benefits paid to its top officials. Because they work directly for international unions based in the U.S., the salaries and benefits paid to Canadian officials like Lawson and McDermott must also be disclosed.

The Teamsters' report for 1977 will not be public for about two weeks.

McDermott, who is in Quebec City, could not be reached directly, but a spokesman at UAW headquarters in Toronto quoted the UAW executive as saying that he was not subject to the wage guidelines.

"We're a non-profit organization and therefore aren't covered (by wage controls)," the spokesman said. "We're not large enough to be covered by the guidelines."

The spokesman also pointed out that if McDermott is successful in his bid for the CLC presidency, he will take a "substantial" personal pay cut.

In Ottawa a spokesman for the Anti-Inflation Board said it would appear that neither Lawson nor McDermott is technically subject to the control guidelines because the organizations for which they work have fewer than 500 employees. The spokesman said, however, that "we are looking into this."

Though the Canadian leaders of the UAW and the Teamsters have received salary increases in excess of Canadian guidelines, the U.S. documents show that the Canadian head of the Steelworkers International Union has not.

In 1976, the report shows, William Mahoney, the recently retired Canadian Steelworkers director, received a salary of $35,000.04 and expenses of $20,517.92. This was exactly the same salary that Mahoney received in 1975, though in that year his expenses totalled $17,594.45.

Unlike the Steelworkers, Auto Workers and Teamsters, some other international unions, with Canadian membership, do not pay their Canadian officials directly from the U.S. These include the International Woodworkers of America and the Seafarers International Union.

For example, the reports on file at the U.S. labor department show that the IWA's Canadian board member, J. J. Munro of Vancouver, received a total of only $2,462 from the U.S.-based union in 1977—$1,050 in wages and $1,412 in expenses. In 1976, Munro received a total of $3,008, of which $800 was salary and $2,208 was expenses.

The Canadian head of the SIU, Roman Gralewicz, was paid no salary by the U.S. head office in 1976. He did, however, receive a total of $3,349 in expenses during the year. In 1975, according to the SIU report, Gralewicz received no expenses or salary.

The international president of the SIU, Paul Hall, is one of the highest paid union officials in North America, if not the highest. In 1975, Hall received a total of $169,449—$149,278 in salary and $20,171 in expenses. The president of the larger Teamsters union, Frank Fitzsimmons, however, runs a close second. In 1976, Fitzsimmons received a total of $155,302.23 in salary and expenses.

TOWN TALK

Two prominent former political leaders, it's reported, would dearly love to be B.C.'s first ombudsman.

B.C. could do worse. Both earned reputations as honest, no-nonsense politicians who weren't shy about speaking out for the rights of John Q. Public versus the government.

The Victoria Symphony office reported last week that during the orchestra's 14-day tour of southern B.C. and Alberta standing ovations were the rule.

But another source says maestro Laszlo Gati bribed audiences in pre-performance comments by saying that if it got a standing ovation the orchestra would play an encore.

A cynic could interpret that as the desire of most people to get as much as possible for their money, while loyal Victoria Symphony fans would say Gati was simply tutoring the uninitiated in what has become, in Victoria, an appropriate response whether deserved or not.

What's in a name? A lot, if it's Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch — the longest place name in the U.K., with 58 letters.

It happened to crop up in Monday's People column, and by Tuesday morning, a number of readers had phoned to tell us we'd misspelled it.

So we ran a correction, getting the correct spelling from a photograph of the name painted on the Welsh village's station.

Now, however, we hear we've misspelled it again, since the station name was painted by an Englishman who couldn't spell in Welsh.

If anyone else has views on the spelling, we'll expect them to pronounce the name before we'll listen to their spelling.

Port McNeill teachers have invited education Minister Pat McGeer to come up on Saturday for some political mudslinging.

It is a party called a Mudfest — and it is also a protest. Dave Manning, president of the Vancouver Island North Teachers Association, says it is outrageous that McGeer allows only four per cent of the cost of a new school to go towards ground clearing.

Manning says this formula may be fine for for Victoria which has flat, cleared land but in the north there are trees to cut, rocks to move and swamps to drain.

In any case, the fun starts at 11:30 a.m. and there will be a gumboot race, mud hurdles and something called a muckball game. They hope McGeer will come up and play.

CFB Esquimalt had its own boozin' bear as a mascot back in the 1920s when the naval base was HMCS Naden.

Naval historian Ron Godden says retired Cmdr. G.B. Barnes recalls HMCS Thiepval making a special trip to Japan via the Aleutians and the Kamchatka Peninsula in 1924 to set up special fuel caches for the round-the-world seapane flight of Major Stuart McLaren.

Two bear cubs were brought back as souvenirs, one of them dying from burns it received when it slept too close to a boiler.

The other survived to become the Naden mascot, acquiring a taste for the hard stuff and becoming a frequent visitor to the wardroom and base messes.

Reports have it the bear ended up as a ruined bruin, finally dying from a liver disorder.

They're not racehorses, and they don't look at all built for speed. But the pundits tell us the five starters are the pre-race favorites for the lighthearted Sooke River Raft Races to be held Saturday and Sunday over a 2½-mile course from the Sooke Potholes to the Sooke River Flats.

The event, organized by the Sooke Volunteer Firemen's Association, is the community's answer to England's Oxford-Cambridge university boat race.

What the rafters lack in style and finesse they more than make up for in zany enthusiasm. And although there's $500 in prizes, the emphasis seems to be on having fun.

This year there's a Captain Cook flavor to the races, and someone purporting to be the intrepid explorer will be the starter at noon Saturday.

Refreshments will be available on the Flats near the finishing point, and there's no admission charge for spectators.

With native Indians unhappy about Capt. Cook bicentennial plans and some of the Tall Ships opting out, it's no small surprise to find Saanich has decided to have Cook's ship, the Resolution, sailing backwards.

The municipality's hall on Vernon Avenue has a pretty impressive pictorial salute to the bicentennial bedecking one of its outer walls, clearly visible from the highway.

Prominently displayed is the stern of the Resolution.

Unfortunately, the artist appears not to be nautical by nature.

The sails are depicted in front of the mast instead of behind, which would force the squarerigger to have to be sailed backwards.

Conservative leader Vic Stephens has named a veteran newspaperman as his assistant.

But John Green, the chap in question, isn't remembered by most folk for his journalistic exploits, laudable though they might have been.

Green (whisper it lest non-Tories hear) is best-known as a true believer in the elusive Sasquatch.

He has written extensively about Big Foot and is classed as almost a guru when it comes to the legendary half-man, half-beast creatures.

Green is 51, married with five children and plans to move to Victoria from his home near Harrison Hot Springs, in the heart of Sasquatch country.

He is currently treasurer of the Tory party in B.C. and contested the provincial leadership back in 1971.

New Annie Oakleys Right on Target

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Three Annie Oakleys are among 21 teenage sharpshooters from across Canada who are completing seven days of intensive competition at Heal's Range.

Eighteen of them will represent Canada in England as the Army Cadet Bisley Team shooting it out with the world's best in rifle competitions.

At 14, Michelle Bellefeuille of Sault St. Marie, Ont., is already a sergeant and shares the honor of being the youngest on the team with David Biddinton of Moncton, N.B.

Among those shooting it out for spots on the team are Paul Bule and Don Hughes of Victoria's Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Army Cadet Corps.

Regardless of the weather, it's been rise and shine at 6 a.m. each day, getting down to range work at 9 a.m. and working right through except for a brief lunch break until 4 p.m.

There's little to distinguish the girl shooters from their companions as they battle it out under the watchful eye of their coach, Major Dick Hampton of Woodland, Ont. who's been involved in rifle competition for about 52 years.

"I started at a tender age and kept at it," says Hampton.

This is the second year girls have been part of the team that will represent Canada in Britain.

Selection of the team began last summer at five rifle training courses across the country. Twenty from each course earned the right to shoot it out at the Connaught Range in Ottawa last August.

The 21 at Heal's Range are the best of that 100.

It won't be all work and no play. Competitions over, the team will sightsee in Britain, France and Germany.

It isn't enough to persuade her to join the army when school days are over, however.

"My mother wants me to do something important. I'm going to be a surgeon," she says.

Eavesdrop Curb Too Expensive

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Scramblers to thwart eavesdroppers who monitor the police radio network are desirable but too expensive, Saanich police board decided Thursday.

The department has 25 mobile units now and the total will be 39 before the end of the year.

Equipment to scramble the broadcast messages with even a medium level of security would cost a minimum of $25,000, board members were told, while the cost per unit for a maximum security system could be up to $2,500.

Such costs are considered unjustified, particularly as criminals can employ unscrambling equipment to continue illegal monitoring.

The board endorsed a suggestion by Police Chief Bob Peterson that the department attempt to tighten up radio security through stricter operating procedures.

Peterson said the B.C. Police College has developed a standard radio code which Saanich police were to start using tomorrow, but there are some teething problems which are still being sorted out.

Meanwhile, he said, officers have been instructed to observe standard operating procedures and have been issued with other guidelines — for example, the rule that names and addresses of complainants are not to be broadcast unless deemed absolutely essential.

Board chairman Mayor Mel Couvelier said he has heard of cases where residents reporting complaints to the police have been reluctant to give their names and addresses, for fear of exposing themselves to some retribution by casual listeners.

In at least one instance, a resident whose name and address were broadcast later had his house vandalized.

"I'm concerned about your sources drying up if we can't solve the scrambling problem," he told the police chief.

Couvelier asked if anonymous calls receive the same degree of priority in police response as those whose sources are fully identified.

Peterson conceded that in practice anonymous calls tend to receive a lesser priority because they often create difficulties, including the problem of checking back for further information and also the doubt that such calls could be used for diversionary purposes by criminals.

As an example of the latter, he recalled an incident several years ago when thieves called out Saanich firemen from the Shelbourne fire station to a non-existent fire, and made off with the station's television set.

Board members agreed that the B.C. Police Commission should be asked to study the whole problem of illegal radio monitoring, particularly from the viewpoint of legislative controls.

Policing Cost Break Wanted

Saanich police board wants a better financial break from the provincial government because a provincial jail and nearly 10 miles of arterial highway lie within Saanich police department's area of jurisdiction.

Board members Thursday approved in principle the draft of a brief on the subject which will be submitted to a provincial task force studying policing costs in B.C. and cost-sharing between the three levels of government.

The brief points out that the Vancouver Island regional correctional centre at Wilkinson Road has a considerable financial impact on the police department's manpower and equipment.

Last year, for example, there were two hostage and eight escape incidents at the institution, not to mention four cases of inmates being unlawfully at large and 36 situations involving police attendance on minor calls.

In manpower alone, said Police Chief Bob Peterson, those incidents cost the municipality $3,892.

But the board chairman, Mayor Mel Couvelier, said if a proportion of the department's fixed costs are included the figure would be much higher.

With regard to highways, the brief notes that 7.4 miles of Highway 17 (Patricia Bay) and 2.3 miles of the Trans-Canada are in Saanich, accounting for 15 per cent of all Saanich road accidents and police activity last year.

Ask The Times

Q. When was the Royal Automobile Club founded? W.W.R.

A. In 1905. It is the second oldest in the world. The first automobile club was founded in France.

Mail Rate Goes Up Tomorrow

If you put a 12-cent stamp on a letter tomorrow it will be an April fool joke on whoever receives it.

There will be postage due.

Greeting cards and other third-class mail will go to 12 cents from 10 cents.

The rate to mail letters to the U.S. will be 14 cents but it will cost 30 cents to mail to any other country, up from 25 cents.

Registration will cost $1.25 effective tomorrow while special delivery will go to 80 cents.

Letters dropped in the box today with 12-cent stamps on them will be delivered, even if they are not picked up until Saturday. Any letter mailed Saturday, however, must have a 14-cent stamp, a post office spokesman said.

The increases will reduce the annual post office deficit by about $125 million, according to Ottawa estimates.

NO CHARGES OVER 'BOMB'

Saanich police say no charges will be laid in connection with a hoax bomb threat that cleared about a dozen homes near 2551 Sinclair Thursday.

Staff Sgt. George Dennison said the incident involved a 14-year-old juvenile and the investigation is completed.

An object removed from a garage at that address by an armed forces explosives team was identified as a large bag and a cardboard box containing plywood.

No Ozard Pact: Gov't

Ozard claims the job as director of marketing in Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy's tourism ministry Feb. 16 was withdrawn after only two hours on the job.

Ozard has taken court action for a ruling whether he is employed by the ministry and the case is expected to go to trial in a month or so.

In a Supreme Court statement of defence, the government says that Ozard was asked to meet the deputy minister after Feb. 13 for final discussions about his employment.

But before the meeting Ozard "caused to be published in a daily newspaper, circulating in the city of Victoria, a message wrongfully implying that approval by the PSC of his appointment to a position in the civil service resulted from the support and help received by the plaintiff from ministers of the Crown and public servants."

Ozard met the deputy minister Feb. 16 and when asked for an explanation of his conduct "asserted that the publication was something he had to do, and that he would do it again."

Ozard was then requested to leave the offices having not carried out any duties of his proposed employment.

Pending the discussion with the deputy minister, the government argues Ozard was not employed by the government and no contract of employment existed.

But, if there was a contract of employment, "which is denied," the government said it was properly terminated according to law.

Ozard, in two affadavits filed at the courthouse, says the government offered to employ him as director of marketing at the ministry of the provincial secretary and travel industry at a salary of $2,035 a month. The letter, dated Feb. 1, from A.G. Richardson, chairman of the Public Service Commissiomn, said the commission approved his appointment to the position of Program Manager 2.

Ozard said he accepted this offer Feb. 3 by telephoning W.R. Henderson, the ministry's director of personnel. On Feb. 13, he said he took his oath of office and on Feb. 16 he started work.

After about two hours, he said he was requested by W.R. Currie, deputy minister, on behalf of the government, to leave the office and await further notice about his duties.

He said around Feb. 24 he received a letter dated Feb. 22 from Richardson which said "I regret that the offer of employment in my letter to you of Feb. 1, 1978, resulting from the above competition is herewith withdrawn. I understand in your discussion with the deputy minister of travel industry that you have been given the reason for this action."

Lax Sale Under Fire

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said Thursday he intends to ask the Liquor Administration Branch to look into what appears to be lax sales supervision at Saanich liquor stores, where juveniles have been able to obtain large quantities of beer, liquor and wine.

His comment followed a police board meeting which was told by Police Chief Bob Peterson that during a seven-month period last year, police in spot checks of liquor outlets seized 1,816 bottles of beer, 866 ounces of liquor, 21 bottles of wine and 18 bottles of cider from juveniles.

A Crash Course In Ethnic Soccer

As press headquarters for Vancouver Whitecaps, the new room is perfect: 24 storeys up for a great view if they're winning, an open balcony with a low railing if they're not.

Trust Herb Capozzi. The man's thought of everything.

If the club is doing well and putting enough people into Empire Stadium to pay the bills, he and general manager John Best can sit back on one of the plush, comfortable couches and think rosy thoughts about the North American Soccer League playoffs. It it isn't, they can flip a coin to see who invites coach Tony Waiters out on to the balcony and—in the finest tradition of the city's professional sports teams over the years—shoves him over.

Not that such a move is anticipated. But this is Vancouver, the elephant's burial ground of professional coaches, home of soccer fans who worry more about ethnic content than final scores. As such it's likely to be something of a shock to the new imports. Lord knows how they'll react.

Perhaps a crash course is in order.

First of all, chaps, you are in an area where being British is not necessarily an advantage. Until the team starts winning it might be best if you didn't advertise the fact.

See, this is Nutty Town. Ask a Vancouver fan half way through the season how the race is going and he'll answer: "Eight British, 10 Canadians." If he laughs when he says it you'll know he's British. If he snarls, he's Scottish, German, Croatian, Portuguese, Italian, Dutch or Greek.

The ethnic mix in the area makes it a certainty that on any given game day at least five races don't like the soccer team. Two years ago when Eckhart Krautzun was signing Germans and Yugoslavs to defend Empire Stadium against excitement, the British fans were ready to repeal V Day. Then Waiters took over, brought in British players, and became the target of fans of six nations.

This year all the imports are British. This has put a tremendous extra work load on Sam Lenarduzzi, the playing PR man. For the first time in history an Italian has had to go around denying that there's a British Mafia.

Waiters, for one, is certain a few victories will resolve the matter. He even joked about it announcing the signing of Wayne Jentas. "Wayne is ideal for this team," he said. "He's a Canadian raised in Britain."

But he doesn't know the town all that well yet. To be on the safe side, maybe you should spread out and disguise yourselves until you see how the season's going. You know — some wear Polish Power T-shirts; a couple get Lenarduzzi to teach you to talk with your hands, and maybe one or two walk like Werner Kempler and say things like "Ve have vays of making you play defence."

You may also wonder just why the club has deemed it necessary to have a meet-the-media room in a downtown hotel. After all, the club trains and plays at Empire Stadium. Press conferences have been held there for two years. Why change?

There is a simple explanation. It is a medical experiment. They are trying to cure us of terminal cynicism.

We are, you see, much maligned and misunderstood. Athletes who spend a year in Vancouver leave convinced that members of the local media hate sport, prefer their children boiled, and help old ladies half way across the street to leave them stranded in the path of gravel trucks.

Admittedly, there are times when we are harsh. But there are extenuating circumstances. When you've seen the 1968 B.C. Lions and the 1978 Canucks in one lifetime your sympathy glands tend to implode. You go to each practice, game or press conference secure in the knowledge that Murphy's Law shall prevail, and whatever can go wrong, will.

Yesterday's trial run showed promise. But let me give you a couple of examples of how the oft-bitten Vancouver media mind works.

In announcing the signing of Jentas, Best said "He has a left foot you want to frame and hang on a wall." In turn, Waiters and Alan Hinton concurred that Jentas did, indeed, have a great left foot.

In any other town in North America, this would mean they'd signed a fine left winger. In Vancouver, three guys wanted to know what was wrong with his right foot.

Best also announced a major signing—that of Mick Lambert, a player of proven credentials. Anywhere else it would have been rated a triumph. But the press release listed Lambert as "an orthodox left winger." Caught in the terminology gap, the media stirred restlessly.

"Pssst! What's an orthodox winger?"

"With our luck, it probably means he's Jewish and can't play Saturdays."

Anyway—welcome, the lot of you. It's a great town, really. You'll get to love it. Everybody does. And despite what they might yell come Sunday, the people here really are great soccer fans.

Still, I'd learn to say hello in five languages. And oh yes, switch to coffee. The tea is a dead giveaway.

Bruins Won't Get Any Heck

LEROY HECK
... still troubled

Victoria Cougars will likely be two players under the league limit of 19 tonight at 8 while facing New Westminster Bruins in Western Division double round-robin Western Canada Hockey League playoff action at Memorial Arena.

Defenceman Leroy Heck, who suffered a hip injury in the Tuesday game against Bruins in New Westminster, was expected to see team doctor Dan Buie today but may be out of commission until next week.

Coach Jack Shupe, who has been operating on an 18-man roster since Jan. 10, won't be calling for help from Nanaimo Clippers, either.

Shupe said the Cougars' B.C. Junior Hockey League affiliate wasn't all "that strong on defence and it's hard for a young player to move up in the playoffs. We'll go with what we have."

Kim Spencer will probably fill in if Heck is unable to play and Todd Morton will serve as a backup.

Shupe is also concerned with scoring.

"Geordie (Robertson) and Gary (Lupul) have been our steadiest players in the playoffs although Geordie is getting far more help from his linemates (Bill Jobson and Bob Jansch) than Lupul. If we're going to make it to the final, we have to win all four home games and one on the road . . . we need goals from more than three players to do it."

"And, we have to get better penalty-killing as we've given up five power-play goals in two games," he added.

Cougars managed seven wins and a tie in seven games against Bruins during the regular season and are 3-2-1 against Winter Hawks, who visit here Tuesday and Thursday next week. Victoria then travels to Portland on Saturday and they finish up the series against Bruins April 7 here and two days later in New Westminster.

Meanwhile, New Westminster Bruins and Lethbridge Broncos recorded 5-2 wins in action Thursday night to take playoff leads.

New Westminster, which defeated Portland on home ice, has a 2-0 record in the Western Division semi-final. Portland is 1-1 and Cougars are 0-2.

New Westminster outshot Portland, 42-25.

VIDA BLUE REPORTS; JONES IN FORM

Bosox Feel Eckersley Key To A.L. Pennant

By The Associated Press

The acquisition of Dennis Eckersley has made Boston Red Sox really believe they can win baseball's American League pennant. The appearance in camp of Vida Blue has convinced San Francisco Giants there really is a Vida Blue, and a nine-inning performance has made Randy Jones really believe he can pitch again.

Eckersley, a hard-throwing right-hander who won 14 games, including a no-hitter for Cleveland Indians last season, was obtained by the Red Sox on Thursday, along with catcher Fred Kendall, from the Indians for pitchers Rick Wise and Mike Paxton, infielder Ted Cox and catcher Bo Diaz.

"We want to win and this gives us a much better shot," Boston general manager Haywood Sullivan said after the long-rumored deal was completed. "We gave up a lot, but we got one of the top five or six pitchers in baseball."

"We got the pitcher we wanted," said Red Sox manager Don Zimmer. "We didn't think we could win with the staff we had. Now we're stronger and our people think we can win."

Last season, Eckersley, 23, struck out 191 in 247 innings while compiling a 14-13 record for the Indians.

Blue, meanwhile, rejoined the Giants, making the club both puzzled and elated.

"I don't know why he left," said general manager Spec Richardson. "He came back on his own. I'm very happy to have him in camp now."

Blue, a fireballing left-hander, had practised only one day with the Giants after being obtained from Oakland A's for seven players March 15. After that, he said he was unhappy with his contract and went to his mother's home in Mansfield, La.

"We have a policy against renegotiating anybody's contract, not just Vida Blue's," said Richardson.

And Jones matched his complete-game total of last season with a route-going effort as San Diego Padres beat California Angels 7-2 in an exhibition contest.

Jones, the 1976 National League Cy Youne Award winner but only 6-12 last year with one complete game after undergoing arm surgery, scattered seven hits and recorded 20 outs on grounders against California.

"It was the best day I've had in 18 months," said Jones, a sinkerball specialist. "I could feel my rhythm and momentum coming back. Bits and pieces today felt just like '76. I'm working toward that same groove and when it happens, I'm going to latch onto it and keep it."

While the Padres were highly encouraged by Jones's showing, Baltimore Orioles got distressing news as ace right-hander Jim Palmer—a three-time American League Cy Young Award winner—withdrew from next week's opening-day assignment.

Palmer, troubled by a sore shoulder, said he was not yet ready after pitching four innings with the Orioles' Rochester club of the International League. The Orioles not only lost their opening day pitcher, but dropped a 3-2 exhibition game to Atlanta Braves, the winning run scoring on a wild pitch by Scott McGregor.

Run-scoring singles by Ron Blomberg and Royle Stillman highlighted a three-run seventh-inning that helped Chicago White Sox edge New York Yankees 3-2. Detroit's Jim Slaton went eight innings, spacing five hits, for his fourth straight victory as the Tigers defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1.

Rod Carew, the six-time American League batting champion, drove in three runs with a single and double, while Geoff Zahn and Greg Thayer combined for a six-hitter as Minnesota Twins blanked Montreal Expos 4-0.

Jim Mason's run-scoring single in the 10th inning lifted Texas Rangers to a 6-5 victory the Kansas City Royals. Cincinnati Reds got the winning run in the 11th inning when St. Louis reliever Butch Metzger overran Mike Lum's tap toward the mound in topping the Cardinals 5-4.

Meanwhile, the White Sox sent catcher Jim Essian and pitcher Steve Renko to Oakland for pitcher Pablo Torrealba, and the Mets obtained pitcher Jim Burton from Boston for infielder Leo Foster.

And several name players were cut, including: outfielder Willie Crawford by Los Angeles; outfielders Von Joshua and Steve Brye and catcher Larry Haney by Milwaukee; pitcher Buzz Capra, catcher Vic Correll and infielders Tom Paciorek and Craig Robinson by Atlanta; pitcher Al Downing, catcher Bill Plummer and outfielder Champ Summers by Cincinnati; infielder Larry Lintz by Oakland, and pitcher Rick Sawyer by Montreal.

VICTORIA TO GET 1983 TOURNAMENT

The executive of the Victoria Golf Club this week endorsed an application for the 1983 Canadian Ladies' Amateur tournament. Acceptance is expected to be a formality since the Canadian Ladies' Golf Union had asked its Vancouver Island branch to submit a bid for the tournament.

It will be the seventh national tournament to be staged in Victoria in just over two decades. The men's amateur and junior men's championships have been staged here twice while the national seniors and junior women's finals have both been played once in the past 20 years.

The women's tournament was staged for the first and only time in the Victoria district in 1955 when Marlene Stewart (Streit) scored a resounding 11 and 9 victory over Kitchener's Mary Gay at Royal Colwood.

Spinks-Ali Rematch Set

MONTREAL (CP) — Leon Spinks, the World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, will defend his title in a 15-round bout against former champion Muhammad Ali in an African country in September.

The Gazette says it learned of the boxing rematch, worth $5 million to each fighter, in a telephone interview with Bob Arum, chairman of Top Rank Inc.

"It's a matter of a week before it's signed," Arum said.

"We signed this option about three weeks ago with a group of business interests anxious to put on the fight in Africa. And that option is to be exercised sometime early next week."

Spinks was stripped of the World Boxing Council portion of the heavyweight title earlier this week for refusing to make his first title defence against Ken Norton, the No. 1 ranked contender.

The WBC installed Norton as its heavyweight champion on Wednesday.

"Leon's attorney is suing the WBC and it's not a big deal anyway," Arum said. "Who gives a damn what the WBC does?

"The WBA, Ring Magazine and the New York Athletic Commission recognize Leon as the champion. After all, he is the champion."

French Have Their Day

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canada-Sweden match-up won their attention but the affection of more than 9,000 fans went to Pierre Boan of France Thursday in the men's world curling championship.

Mike Chernoff of Medicine Hat pleased the crowd with an 8-5 victory over Tom Schaeffer of Sweden in the eighth-round feature to assure the Canadian team of a playoff berth.

But it was a ninth-end shot by Boan that set off a deafening and sustained applause from the crowd, a salute extended no other shot or curler so far in the championship as France defeated Jimmy Sanderson of Scotland 6-2 in nine ends.

Boan stole four consecutive points to defeat the Scottish team and in the ninth end he made what many observers called the shot of the championship.

Boan, with last rock, faced four Scottish rocks clustered in and around the four-foot. He might have gone for a shot that, if successful, would have cut the count to one for Scotland. But he elected to make an extremely difficult draw and he made it, much to the joy of the fans who gave him a prolonged standing ovation.

Going into the final round of the 10-rink competition this morning, Canada shared first place with Bob Nichols of the United States, both with 6-2, won-lost records.

Under terms of a playoff format, the first and fourth place and the second and third-place teams will meet in the semi-finals Saturday.

There is a more complicated formula that goes into effect if there are any ties for the last playoff berth.

Junior Recruits Power Athletics

Ed Beauchemin and Geoff Murdoch, picked up from Saanich Braves of the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League, came up with outstanding efforts Thursday to spark Victoria Athletics to a 9-3 decision over Esquimalt Maple Leafs in South Island Big Six Hockey League playoff action at Pearkes Arena.

Beachemin scored four goals and Murdoch blocked 29 shots as the Athletics picked up their first victory out of three games in the best-of-seven final series.

John Entzminger added three goals for Athletics and singles were contributed by Dan Peck and Bryon Preston.

The series continues at 8:15 p.m. Saturday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Krantz Leading Indonesian Test

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Mike Krantz of the United States moved into the lead at the $40,000 Indonesian Open Golf Tournament today with a three-under-par 68 for a 36-hole total of 136.

Krantz replaced first-day leader Hsu Seng San of Taiwan, who fired an even-par 71 for a two-day total of 137.

Kromm Not Thrilled With His Panty-Waists

By The Canadian Press

Bobby Kromm wasn't mincing words Thursday night.

After watching his Red Wings drop a 4-0 decision to Los Angeles Kings—only their second loss in the last 13 starts—the Detroit coach was disgusted.

"We did nothing right all night long," complained Kromm. "We didn't win faceoffs. We didn't skate. We never hit anyone and we didn't make any plays. We played like panty-waists.

"Maybe they (the Wings) thought all they had to do was lay their sticks on the ice. You don't win hockey games that way."

Kromm was not the only one to watch the game who came away disappointed. The contest drew a record 16,654 fans to the Olympia Stadium.

The victory lifted Los Angeles back into second place in the Norris Division, one point ahead of the Red Wings who enjoy two games in hand on the Kings.

However, both teams were guaranteed a playoff berth with the 6-3 loss inflicted upon Pittsburgh Penguins by Boston Bruins. Until Thursday, Pittsburgh held a mathematical chance of passing either the Kings or the Red Wings for the final playoff spot in the division.

Elsewhere Thursday, Cleveland Barons surprised Buffalo Sabres 5-3 and Washington Capitals edged Colorado Rockies 4-3 (Summaries on page 29).

Mike Murphy scored his 18th goal of the season at 10:21 of the opening period to give Los Angeles all the scoring it needed.

The close checking of the Kings' forwards the rest of the way made goaltender Rogie Vachon's shutout an easy one. Detroit could muster only 13 shots at the Los Angeles netminder.

Wayne Cashman scored his 20th goal to tie an NHL team record and help Boston to its win over Pittsburgh, which has not won at Boston Garden in 27 games dating back to the 1967-68 season.

Cashman, who opened the scoring at 10:15 of the first period, became the 10th Bruin to score 20 goals this season, matching a mark set by Boston in 1970-71 and tied by Montreal Canadiens in 1974-75. Terry O'Reilly added a pair for the Bruins.

Guy Charron's unassisted goal midway in the third period, his second of the game, carried Washington to its come-from-behind win over Colorado.

The Rockies, fighting for a playoff berth in the Smythe Division, appeared to have the game in control through its early stages. But the visiting Capitals fought back with two goals to stay within striking distance at 3-2 after two periods, and scored another two in the final 20 minutes to pull out the victory.

Mayer Trips Bob Lutz

Times News Services

Fourth-seeded Sandy Mayer of New York defeated Bob Lutz of San Clemente, Calif., 6-4, 6-2 at Milan, Italy, today and moved into the semi-finals of a $175,000 World Championship Tennis tournament.

Mayer, 26, survived an ordeal of broken serves in the first set to down Lutz, a 31-year-old doubles specialist, in one hour, 10 minutes.

In Oakland, Calif., Thursday, Virginia Wade lost the first five games before rallying for a 1-6, 6-2, 6-4 victory over Billie Jean King in a $150,000 women's professional tennis tournament.

King suffered a leg cramp in the ninth game of the final set, when the score was tied 4-4 and Wade was serving.

Wade aced King with a second serve, and it became obvious how handicapped King was. King took the last game to deuce, however, before losing it. Wade got the final point of the match with a cross-court shot which King didn't even try to reach.

Wendy Turnbull defeated Kerry Reid 7-6, 6-1. She will meet Navratilova Saturday night, with the winner becoming one of the finalists.

Chris Evert, who won the championship last year, is absent because she didn't play in enough tournaments to qualify.

At Dayton, Ohio, top-seeded Brian Gottfried advanced to the quarter-finals of the $75,000 Dayton tennis tournament Thursday with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Billy Martin.

Third-seeded Tim Gullickson of Onalaska, Wis., defeated Ove Bengtson of Sweden 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

His twin brother, Tom, made the quarter-finals with a 7-5, 6-0 decision over Byron Bertram of South Africa.

Second-seeded Eddie Dibbs was a 6-3, 6-2 winner over John Yuill of South Africa; Harold Solomon, seeded third, eliminated Gene Mayer 6-4, 6-3, and fifth-seeded Arthur Ashe had little trouble with Ashok Amritraj of India, winning 6-0, 6-3.

"Where do I put my mouth?"

Molina Surprise Leader

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — In his own country, he's probably the nation's best golfer—winner of some 40 tournaments, five times the national open champion, twice a representative of Argentina in World Cup play.

But Florentino Molina, a slender 39-year-old, is just another face on the American Professional Golfers Association Tour, a battler for a spot in the Monday-morning qualifying rounds; largely unsuccessful in four years of competition on the American tour; often in danger of losing his playing rights.

He says he could make more money at home. Why then, he was asked, fight the American tour?

"I like," Molina grinned.

He likes it even more now.

His six-under-par 66 gave him the first-round lead Thursday in the $240,000 Greater Greensboro Open. It marked the first time Molina has held a clear lead in an American event.

But that unusually high position in a chase for a $48,000 first prize—more than he's won in his American career—bothers him not at all.

"I win 40 tournaments," he said. "Maybe one more. Three more good rounds and maybe I win one more. Why not?"

He held a single shot advantage over Wally Armstrong, a non-winner whose

Gene Littler, a 47-year-old veteran, 24-year-old rookie David Thore, and a pair of one-time high school teammates from San Jose, Calif., Roger Maltbie and Forrest Fezler, had 68s on the hilly, 6,984-yard Forest Oaks Country Club course.

Lanny Wadkins, the PGA champion and the top attraction in a weak field, shot 70. Defending titleholder Danny Edwards took 76, four strokes higher than his brother Dave, an amateur. Al Geiberger had a 72 in his first start of the season.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby, B.C., fired nines of 34-41 for a three-over-par 75.

Molina, a pro since 1957, gained his American playing rights in 1974 but didn't start on the tour until the following year. It's been a constant struggle to retain his Approved Players' card since.

Post Seven Under

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Post hasn't exactly set the women's golf tour on fire the 10 years she's been on the circuit, but the Oakville, Ont., native did get off to a blazing start in the richest event on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour on Thursday.

Post, who has won just two LPGA tournaments and has gone four years since her last triumph, shot a sev-under-par 65 Thursday to shatter the Mission Hills Country Club course record and take the first-round lead in the $305,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle golf tournament.

Her round, which included a five-under-par 31 on the front nine and a two-under 34 on the back over the 6,302-yard layout, bettered the course and tournament record of 66 set by both Kathy McMullen and Sue Roberts in the 1975 Winners Circle.

The 65 was good for a three-shot lead over Hollis Stacy, who had a 33-35—68. McMullen was alone at 70, while Jan Stephenson, Mary Mills and Debbie Massey shared fourth place at 71.

Post, who now resides in Boynton Beach, Fla., was the tour rookie of the year in 1968. She posted an 18-hole playoff victory that year over Kathy Whitworth in the LPGA Championship, but her only other victory was in the 1974 Far East Open.

However, the 29-year-old does not seem to mind the long winless spell.

"I feel very fortunate that I make a good living, even though I haven't won for a long time," said Post, who finished ninth on the earnings list in 1977 with $77,000 in prize money.

"It really doesn't bother me not to win. After all those years, you learn not to let things bother you."

Canada Defeated In Hockey Playoff

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Malaysia defeated Canada 2-0 today to assure itself of at least a 10th-place finish in the World Cup field hockey tournament and a place in the next World Cup in India in 1982.

Canada and Malaysia had finished with identical records of one win, two draws and three losses in their respective groups in the round-robin competition and played off to determine the final lower rankings.

Canada did most of the running in the match but was shut out by Malaysia's stingy defence. The Malaysian offence, meanwhile, played conservatively but made good on the only two scoring chances it had.

BOWLERS OF THE WEEK

Making tenpin awards a family affair in 23rd week of 15th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest are Jeannette Morneau and her brother-in-law Orel Morneau. Jeannette captured women's award with 187-191-209 — 587 series in Sunday Niters League and Orel connected for men's laurels with 204-201-231 — 636 series in Victoria Senior League. Both division-topping efforts were rolled at Mayfair Lanes.

Hanlon Called Up To Replace Curt

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks have recalled goaltender Glen Hanlon to replace injured Curt Ridley on the roster of the slump-ridden National Hockey League team.

Ridley suffered a knee injury Wednesday in St. Louis when the Canucks lost 3-1 to the Blues. He pulled himself from the game after twisting his leg while failing to stop Inge Hammarstrom from scoring in the first period.

Hanlon, 21, had played 51 games this season for Tulsa Oilers of the Central Hockey League and had one of the best goals-against averages in the CHL at 3.07. He had three shutouts and a record of 25 wins, 23 losses and three ties.

Eight Teams of Juniors In Double-Knockout Races

Junior members of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will be hosting the annual Gladwell Regatta this weekend with eight teams from various clubs taking part in the double knockout team racing.

Racing will be in the club's Flying Juniors, complete with spinnakers, starting Saturday and Sunday at 9 a.m.

To be eligible the sailors must be between 16 and 21 years of age.

Because of the regatta the club's Laser enthusiasts have cancelled series racing until next week but many of the club's keel boat sailors will be joining boats of the Turkey Head Sailing Association on Sunday for two around-the-buoys races in waters off Oak Bay Marina. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

While none of the RVYC boats that took part in the Southern Strait of Georgia classic last weekend ended up in the money they certainly had a good warmup for Swiftsure, handling rough conditions that tested the mettle of all the crews. Quite an endurance test.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club has the last of its Sidney Channel 10½-mile series races on Sunday. The start will be at 9:30 a.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at Sidney.

★ ★ ★

Last Saturday's six-miler was won by C.A. Fields' Yola. After her came Ken Martin's Sana, Tzonqua, Caliente, Water Mellon and Tony Burton's Minnewanka.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Minnewanka might have won the race but for a slight mishap. Tony had his brother-in-law's dog aboard — you guessed it. The dog fell over the side and they had to come about and retrieve the animal with a fishnet.

Tied for seventh spot after Minnewanka were Don Wilson's Menehune and Vagrant. Temenos and Bea Richmond's Lunar Wind tied for ninth place.

★ ★ ★

Out at Sidney on Sunday the Saanich Peninsula Sailing Association will have a sail-past and a beach-clearing session at Tulista Park. Low tide will be about 8 a.m.

Henry won't be at the work session himself. It's not that he is allergic to hard work. He's visiting his native Holland on his first holiday in 27 years.

★ ★ ★

Centreboard sailors of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will have series racing in Esquimalt Harbor on Sunday, beginning at 10 a.m.

The squadron's Laser sailors have now completed their frostbite series with Frank Towler winning to nobody's surprise. Runner-up was Robin Spear.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club will meet at the Esquimalt Lagoon bridge for a paddle on the lagoon on Sunday with graduates of the recent paddling course being able to put their newly-gained knowledge into use.

If the weather co-operates it is suggested members take along their favorite warm drinks and sandwiches, making a picnic of the outing. More importantly, they're advised to take along an extra set of dry clothes — just in case.

Offensive Tackle Signed by Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says offensive tackle Jim Lohmann has signed a Canadian Football League contract with British Columbia Lions.

The evening newspaper said Lohmann was a free agent after being released in 1977 by Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League.

Lohmann, 6-foot-5 and 250 pounds, played college football at the University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP) and was not selected in the NFL draft because of a knee injury.

The Lions, who were in the Western Football Conference final in 1977 for the first time in 13 years, finished last season with imports Layne McDowell and Al Simpson at offensive tackle.

Conservation Issues Missing In Speech

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Just as expected, the provincial throne speech Thursday contained little in the way of encouraging news for conservationists . . . Repleat with promises of increased development, it boasted of government policy changes which expanded exploration for oil and natural gas and boosted mineral production by 20.8 per cent in 1977 — without mentioning any steps which might be taken to further lessen the environmental impact of these activities . . . The job creation section dealt with the usual cosmetic activities of construction, highway-building and tourist promotion rather than anything that could enhance or rehabilitate some of the natural beauty of this province on which a significant portion of our economy depends . . . To be sure, there were promises of the new forest act, some acquisition of parkland to "enhance public access to shoreline recreation" and a new wildlife management plan to provide special protection to threatened and endangered species . . . But there were no real surprises.

★ ★ ★

Good news for Vancouver Island hunters . . . There might be an open season on bull elk in a portions of management unit 1-12 and 1-13 . . . In addition, there will likely be a limited entry (residents-only) elk hunt in portions of units 1-9 and 1-10 . . . Early word has it that the bulls will have to be four points or better and reporting will be compulsory.

★ ★ ★

Speaking about hunting . . . There's a welcome addition to the regulations for the coming season, in terms of preserving some of our more susceptible game species in certain areas . . . Beginning Saturday, hunters will be restricted to one grizzly bear every five years throughout the Kootenay region . . . This measure was made necessary by an unprecedented harvest during the spring of 1977, aided by increased access into key alpine areas and most major watersheds . . . In addition to this quota, other protective measures such as area closures and reduced seasons and bag limits may be introduced . . . A one-in-five-years regulation may also be placed on mountain sheep in the Junction management area.

★ ★ ★

Jim Gallie, who served as secretary for 16 years before stepping down this year, was presented with a life membership at the recent annual combined awards dinner of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association and Chinook Club . . . Bill Bell earned five trophies for the 51 pound, 10 ounce chinook salmon he landed during the year and Frank Jenvey was presented with the top award as executive of the year . . . Other award winners were Wyn Silburn, Rod Chow, Lil Walton, Harmon Leong, Karl Leong, Alf Joyce, Annie Alexander, Mike Sekoranja, B. Oliver, Michael Rose and Ada Smith.

★ ★ ★

Some big chinooks are starting to turn up in waters between Sooke and Oak Bay . . . Tops was a 36-pounder landed Monday by John Fletcher along the north side of Frazer Island in Becher Bay . . . Carman Angus got a 35½-pounder off the Sooke Bluffs on Friday and Peter Pike beached a 35-pounder Sunday while buzz-bombing off the rocks at Ten Mile Point . . . Numerous chinooks in the five to eight pound bracket are showing in most waters . . . Trout fishing is turning better in Langford, Elk, Shawnigan, Dougan's, Quamichan, Lower Campbell and Sayward Forest lakes.

A 'World' for Women?

WINNIPEG (CP) — An invitational world women's curling competition will be held next year in Perth, Scotland, with a view to holding an annual world championship.

Colin Campbell of Toronto, re-elected Thursday as president of the International Curling Federation, told a news conference the women's committee of the federation had been authorized to proceed with the event and seek a sponsor.

Dorothy New of Edmonton, chairman of the women's committee, said preliminary discussions for a world women's championship have been held with a number of prospective sponsors but she declined to identify them.

She said the invitational competition will be held a week before the men's world championship in Berne, Switzerland Mar. 26-Apr. 1, and will involve at least nine of the countries now taking part in the men's. Denmark has not yet confirmed it will compete.

In another development, Campbell said word was received Thursday that Unroyal has confirmed it will continue its sponsorship of the world junior men's curling championship to 1985.

Stanford Side Rallies To Hand Vikes Defeat

Stanford of California rallied to take a 12-6 edge at half time and then went on to drop University of Victoria Vikings 16-6 in an exhibition rugby match Thursday at Centennial Stadium.

Vikings, who topped the University of California (Berkeley) 12-6 the previous night, took an early 6-0 lead against Stanford when Jamie Hawthorne booted two penalty goals from about 25 yards.

But the visiting XV came back on tries by Kim Mumby and John Jellico and two conversions by Dan Villenueva.

Vikings lost the services of Brent Isaacs, who had scored two tries against Berkeley, and Jim Witters during the match. Isaacs suffered a rib injury and Witters pulled a hamstring muscle.

Stanford will next face a Vancouver Island Union Selects side Saturday at 2:30 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

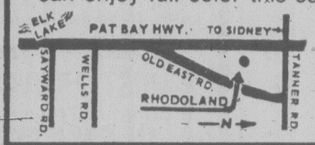

Named to the Selects were Dwayne Van Eeuwan, Barclay Logan, Derek Garside, George Roberts, John Davis, Pat Simmons, Steve Cowie and Gerry Rees, all of Cowichan; John Carroll, Murray Hatt, Denny Sinnott, Pat Trelawney, Jim Wenman and Peter Kilshaw of Oak Bay Wanderers and Ed McCauley of Castaways.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver the same day, University of British Columbia Thunderbirds scored 23 points in the second half to defeat University of California Golden Bears, 26-3.

The score was tied 3-3 at halftime.

FUEL ECONOMY NUMBERS ARE A GUIDE, NOT A GUARANTEE.

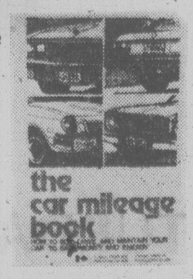

When you're checking the fuel economy of a particular car, remember two points. First, the tests are conducted in a laboratory, following approved Transport Canada test methods. Many of the tests are conducted on prototype cars which may achieve slightly better fuel economy than those off the assembly line.

Also, how and where you drive can alter fuel economy. Be prepared for fluctuations resulting from wind, humidity, temperature, hills, turns, road surfaces, and short trips. Of course, your driving habits and the condition of your car also have significant effects. Recent estimates show an average drop of about 11% from the mileage on the sticker to actual mileage achieved under normal road conditions.

WASN'T WEARING SEATBELT

NANAIMO (CP) — Glen Donald Warwick, 17, of Nanaimo, died Thursday in a car accident here.

Two passengers in the car suffered minor injuries.

RCMP said Warwick, who was not wearing a seat belt, was thrown out of the car, and pinned under it.

Only Strategy Session

The meeting of the provincial legislature's committee investigating Crown corporations scheduled for April 5 will only be a strategy session involving committee members, its chairman said Thursday.

Elwood Veitch, the Socred MLA for Burnaby-Willingdon, was commenting on a report that the committee was holding an in camera meeting with members of the Housing Corporation of B.C.

He said in a news release there will not be, nor had there ever been intended, any in camera briefing of HCBC officials.

"The only in camera meeting will be a strategy session involving the committee members only, on the day preceding the hearing," Veitch said.

"No one from the corporation will be present on April 5."

Walter Davidson (SC—Delta) had criticized the committee for deciding to hold a closed session.

Workers To Return Monday

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — About 1,200 members of the International Woodworkers of America who walked off the earlier this week at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. divisions will not return to work until Monday, union president Earl Foxcroft said Thursday.

Local 1-85 members walked out at the Cous-Taylor, Cameron and Franklin River divisions Thursday, following workers at the Sarita division who walked off Wednesday.

A company spokesman said the strike is a protest over the two-day suspension Wednesday of a camp crew chairman at the Sarita division.

Forxcroft said the crew feels that if the company is allowed to discipline a chairman for a crew's actions, no one will volunteer for the position.

He said the employees will return to work Monday, when the chairman's suspension is over.

Not All Models are Willowy

By ANGELA TAYLOR
New York Times

NEW YORK — The mannequins who slink down fashion runways are pretty much out of this world. Most of them are taller, have broader shoulders, are narrower through the rib cage and flatter at the bosom and hips than "real" women. Their attenuated elegance does a lot for a dress, which is why designers plan their display samples on them.

But when the reality of manufacturing sets in and the dress is to be reproduced in hundreds, the five-foot-eight-inch model with a size 6 figure is of no use to the pattern maker. For that, the production manager of a fashion house calls in a "fitter's" model. She needn't be a raving beauty, but she must be a perfect size, curving in or out where the potential customer does.

The pattern is made on the fitter's model; she returns when the garment is put together and adjustments are made. She may be required a third time for further adjustments. The model should be intelligent enough to make suggestions, but tactful about trying to redesign a dress.

"Nobody wants to know whether you'd buy the dress," said Tatiana Kalatschova. "They want to know how a dress feels, whether you can move in it, if the bottons are in the right place, if the pockets are too high or too low."

Tatiana — she is known by her last name alone — is a perfect fitter's model. She is 5 feet 7, weighs 117 pounds and her measurements are 35½-26½-36½, which makes her an ideal size 8. (The half inches are an advantage: Manufacturers allow a one-inch leeway on small sizes, more on large ones.)

She is also blond and pretty enough to have begun her career as a runway and photographer's model. And smart enough to have started the first agency — The Fitters Model Agency at 1441 Broadway — to supply the garment industry with models ranging from 5-foot-tall, junior petites to a 16½ model for women's sizes. Although her income is in the six-figure bracket, she still goes out on modelling appointments herself.

There are production managers who won't work with anyone else. A great deal of money rides on whether the sample is absolutely correct and whether the "grading" is precise. (Grading means increasing or decreasing the pattern for a complete size range.) "If it is not right," Tatiana explained, "then you have a very expensive fiasco."

Tatiana speaks seven languages and her English is piquantly flovored with Russian syntax. She was born in Brazil, where her White Russian family had immigrated.

She, in turn, left Brazil to do runway modeling in France and Italy. A French fashion show brought her to New York in 1969; discovering that models were paid better here, she stayed.

She was doing runway modeling when a designer noticed her realistic proportions and asked her to model for what the industry calls its duplicates — the garments made for sale. Word got around the pattern rooms that Tatiana's waist was in exactly the right place and that she curved out properly behind for pants. Production managers asked her if she knew other models and she recommended her friends.

Since she was acting as an agent, a few months ago she decided to set up her own business in the heart of the garment district. The building has entrances both on Seventh Avenue (the better houses) and Broadway (the mass companies). Her modeling stable began with 15 of her friends and has increased to 60 models.

In Tatiana's office for the other day, two of her models were ready to go on assignment. Libby Huntington is 5 feet 1 inch, weighs 103 pounds and is a size 7-8 petite. Pat Swift is size 16½, 5 feet 6 inches and weighs 178 pounds. Miss Swift says manufacturers are grateful for her opinion; if she absolutely hates something, she says so.

The fee for a fitter's model is $35 to $50 and the work is not as seasonal as runway modeling. Although there is a lull in fashion shows right now, Tatiana's telephone kept ringing with requests for fitting models.

Miss Huntington was off and running to a junior house on Broadway and Tatiana had a fitting appointment on Seventh Avenue. Does the "perfect" woman have any flaws? Yes, her arms are a mite shorter than a size 8 should be, but that's easily allowed for.

CADDY GOES HOME

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 23-karat gold Cadillac headed home to its Texas garage Sunday after a brief appearance here at an auction. Offers to get it to Mississippi fell thousands of dollars short.

The dazzling 1931 Fleetwood convertible with mink carpet and diamond-studded hubcaps brought a high bid of $85,000 from Odis Brown of Jackson, Miss., a retired insurance executive.

"Someday somebody will pay $200,000 for this car," said Glen Boydstun, a Ft. Worth collector who decided he liked his gilded prize better than Brown's offer. "I think it is worth $100,000 or more right now."

Brown had outlasted two museum dealers at the Kruse Collector Car Auction on Saturday when the bidding was closed.

Boydstun, a manufacturing executive who says he collects cars as a hobby, picked up the Cadillac last year from a man who paid $100,000 for it at an auction. He won't say what he paid, but described it as less than that.

It is a spectacular vehicle, with one-64th-inch gold plating all over—even on the wire wheels, door handles and windshield wipers. Any metal that couldn't be gilded is chromed.

Boydstun only drives it eight to 10 blocks at a time and stores it in a vault-like garage. On trips such as this, he transports the vehicle in a truck.

"It's just one of a kind," Boydstun said, "and people get a big thrill out of owning one of a kind. I'm no different."

Vicar Accommodates TV Fans

LOWICK, England (CP) — Sunday evening worship in the village church of Lowick, in the English Lake District, clashed with the television showing of a serial based on James Herriot's novel It Shouldn't Happen To a Vet.

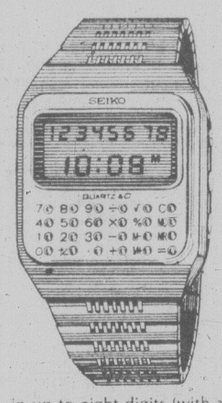

It shouldn't happen to a vicar either; but the parishioners asked him to advance the service by 45 minutes—from 7 to 6:15 p.m.—so they could get home in time to watch the show.

"Normally I wouldn't agree that television should interfere with church worship," said the vicar, Rev. William Kelly. "But I saw their dilemma and agreed to do what they asked. The important thing is that they didn't want to skip church and stay home for the show.

"We are a rural community and I am glad the parishioners have found a program they can really enjoy. James Herriot's story of a country vet reflects our way of life better than most of the shows we get."

One of the parishioners, Mary Holmes, agreed. "We are country people," she said, "and we naturally enjoy films about country life in preference to gangsters and bank robbers."

Schon's Fashions Shone

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Mila Schon, considered by many to be Italy's master tailor and first lady of couture, showed her fall and winter ready-to-wear collection to an enthusiastic audience Wednesday night.

Schon is known for her classic lines and has never really captured the young audience in the past, but will be able to do so this time around.

The sports clothes were beautiful, beginning with a group of white wools including sweaters, skirts and pants. All the tops came with long, wool scarves and knitted caps in white.

The skirts, jackets, blazers and suits came in alpaca, mohair, cashmere, Donegal tweeds and flannels. Burgundy, navy, camel and gray were the predominant colors and were mixed and matched in stunning combinations.

Schon showed collarless blazers and jackets, skirts flat over the hips breaking into godet pleats at the bottom. Big jackets went over blazers and skirts and ponchos over the suits. All were topped by long, slim cashmere scarves in contrasting colors.

Of the dresses, the best were super-sheer georgette in assymetric prints, many with sleeveless silk sweaters in matching colors.

The impeccable tailoring and details of the sports clothes was up to Schon's usual high standards.

Schon's evening clothes did not come off as well, but the rest of the collection made up for it.

Walter Albini, a designer well known in Italy, showed the first collection under his own label and the clothes were geared toward a young and adventuresome clientel, starting with a group of rainwear in polished cotton and quilted cotton pants and jackets.

Short tunic skirts were worn over skinny pants and topped by little battle jackets with zipper pockets under pile-lined short cotton coats.

Jumpsuits were revived in cotton velour and wool jersey, many with channel stitching, belted, zippered and hugging the body. This group was the most amusing.

Albini also showed soft, little, suede suits with small belted jackets, wool dresses under cocoon-like sheer wool coats in matching colors. There also was sweater dressing and layering.

For evening, he showed good paisley prints and printed lame, sheer gauze and silk georgette.

The colors were as many and varied as the combinations of fabrics — some very good and some mediocre.

The Best Move Is Away - Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old professional man, single and never married. I recently became attracted to a very pretty girl who works at a fast-food counter, and I could tell she liked, me. I asked for six pieces of fish and she gave me eight. The next day she gave me change for a five dollar bill when I gave her a one.

After talking to her today, I found out that she's only a junior in high school. Could I get into any trouble if I asked her out? (I read that Dostoevski married an 18-year-old girl when he was 50 and they had a wonderful marriage.)

I need your answer before I make any moves.

BILL

DEAR BILL: never mind that Dostoevski did; that was 100 years ago. The schoolgirl to whom you are attracted either can't count or she's giving her boss's store away. If you are planning any "moves," I advise you to move in the direction of a girl closer to your own age.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently moved here and quite by accident we learned that my husband has a niece in a private institution within half an hour's drive from our house. (I'll call this niece "Nellie.")

Naturally we went to visit Nellie at once, after which we phoned her mother (my husband's eldest sister) to tell her we had seen her daughter.

Nellie's mother objected strenuously to our visiting Nellie. She said the girl has been a "hopeless vegetable" since birth (she is now 28 years old) and it would have been much better had we left the family skeleton in the closet where it belonged instead of digging it up! (We ignored her wishes and continued to visit Nellie.)

Abby, in the few months we've been visiting her, she has learned to recognize us and seems so happy to see us. The head doctor there told us that Nellie has improved physically since we've been giving her our love and attention. He has even let us take her home on Sundays.

The problem is nellie's mother. She has asked us to stay away from her daughter. She pays for her support but hasn't visited her once!

Should we continue seeing Nellie in spite of her mother's objections?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I can see only good resulting from your visits, and I would continue to give Nellie as much love and attention as you possibly can.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently died. I think it would have bee nice if the doctor who had taken care of him during his illness had sent some kind of condolence message, don't you. Or don't doctors believe in that?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: If the patient was only a patient, all the doctor sends is his bill. If the patient has been a personal friend, the doctor would send his condolences and a bill.

Choosing Good Day Care

caveat emptor

Parents who go to work, or to school, or in fact are house-bound during the day, have two major forms of child care to choose from for pre-school children.

Because of the shortage of licensed day care, the most available is unlicensed, unsupervised care that may be provided by a relative or a baby sitter down the street. If you have no choice but to put your child in an unlicensed arrangement, check out the facilities and the care-giver carefully.

The other major category is the licensed day care provided by day care centres and nursery schools as well as by lunch and after-school programs and private home day care agencies. However, licensed day care amounts to only about 15 per cent of all the arrangements available. Not all working parents are eligible for it, either because of income or location.

But be aware that although a form of day care is licensed, it may still only meet basic minimum standards of health, safety and staffing. It does not guarantee the quality of the program. So here, too, you must know exactly what to look for.

Among the things to keep in mind is the stability of a given type of child care arrangement. Constant switching of your child from one day care situation to another is disruptive. According to one study, the rate at which parents change baby sitters is double the rate at which they change day care centres. This lack of stability is a major drawback of care by baby sitters.

Another thing to look for is the ratio between the number of care givers and the number of children cared for. Good ratios are part of a sound day care environment and help give a child a good start in life. Studies have shown that poor ratios can lead to personality disturbances centring around a child's inability to establish and maintain close personal relationships. They can also lead to problems in learning to use language.

The best ratios, says the experts, have one adult to not more than three children under 18 months of age, and one adult to between about five and eight children between the ages of two and five. For school-aged children in lunch and after-school day care programs, the best ratio is one adult to not more than 15 children.

The ratios permitted by provincial day care legislation vary widely across Canada. Some of the provinces have very good ratios, others very poor ones.

Keep in mind also that even the best legislation for the ratios which are allowed in day care may contain some enormous loopholes. For example, some expensive private schools provide a form of day care for children but do not come under provincial day care regulations. Instead, they come under the provincial ministry of education. As a result, some of these private schools have ratios as high as one adult to 35 children, for children aged three and four.

Similarly, public school kindergartens have ratios of one teacher to 25 children, for children of four and five. Remember that according to the studies, an optimum ratio for this age group is really one adult to eight or nine children at the most. One school trustee who visited kindergartens in her borough later charged that most of them provide little more than group baby sitting.

In future articles, I'll discuss other points to think about when choosing day care for your child.

Home Preggy Test Queried

Do-it-yourself pregnancy testing has come a long way from the days when it consisted of a mixture of witchcraft and guesswork, but it is still a procedure with questionable accuracy. Experts warn women to always follow up a home pregnancy test with a visit to the doctor, as various complications won't be revealed by the home test.

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times

The women of ancient Egypt, the records say, drank a concoction of pounded watermelon mixed with the breast milk of someone who had borne a son. If they vomited, it was considered evidence of pregnancy. And, according to Hebrew scriptures, women whose feet sank deeply into soft ground were presumed to be with child.

Fortunately, for the women of the 20th century, pregnancy testing today is a lot less messy and a lot more scientific, not to mention far more accurate. And the science of pregnancy testing has been refined to the point where women may be able to diagnose their own pregnancy (or lack therof) using do-it-yourself tests purchased at a pharmacy.

Clearly, there are advantages to a self-test that is reliable and easy to use. One is simple reassurance. Women who are anxious about a possible pregnancy can find out one way or another promptly, without waiting for a doctor's appointment. Such women might include those with irregular periods, those whose periods have not returned after stopping oral contraceptives, those with infertility problems and those who do not want to be pregnant.

If a woman wants an abortion, she can arrange for it promptly, and if she is early enough she can have the simpler and less costly procedure of menstrual extraction to terminate the pregnancy. For the woman who desires pregnancy, a self-test can help protect the baby by prompting the woman to start proper prenatal care during the first month of pregnancy, when the risk of damage to the fetus is greatest.

Despite such advantages, some experts question the advisability, accuracy and economy of self-tests for pregnancy and warn of the need, in many cases, to follow them up promptly with a visit to a physician.

An intricate but sensitive test for pregnancy called radioreceptor assay was developed several years ago at Cornell University Medical Centre. Using radioactive materials, it can detect pregnancy with better than 99 per cent accuracy one day after a missed period. But it requires special training and costly equipment.

A simpler, albeit less accurate and more delayed, immunological test forms the basis of pregnancy test kits that can be used by women themselves, without a doctor's prescription or an intervening laboratory.

Studies in Canada, where do-it-yourself pregnancy tests have been sold for years, show that few women trust the results of the tests they do themselves. Many go to the pharmacist to have the test repeated.

The American College of obstetrics and Gynecology says it has no objections per se to over-the-counter pregnancy tests, as long as the directions for use are clear and the woman is advised to see a doctor if the results warrant it. A doctor, incidentally, can diagnose pregnancy on the basis of a physical exam, without a chemical test, at about two weeks after a missed period.

If the woman is pregnant and wants to be, the doctor should examine her for potential complications and advise her about proper diet and avoidance of drugs, cigarettes and alcohol. If she doesn't want to be pregnant, she should seek an abortion right away, when the procedure is safest. Before doing the abortion, the doctor or clinic should repeat the pregnancy test.

Another concern is women with ectopic pregnancies, which lodge in a fallopian tube instead of the uterus. If not removed surgically, ectopic pregnancies eventally rupture and could result in death. A self-test may give a negative result early in an extopic pregnancy, giving the woman false assurance; or somewhat later it could have a positive result, leading the woman to think she has a normal pregnancy or that she needs an abortion (which would not remove an ectopic pregnancy).

Any woman with a positive pregnancy test who has an IUD in place or who has had a sterilization operation should see a physician promptly to check on the posibility of an ectopic pregnancy.

Pain in Child's Ear May Not be 'Serious'

My daughter is almost three years old. It seems to me that she has been taking antibiotics since she was born. Almost every week she complains of pain in the ear. The doctor now says she has a serious middle ear infection. Can anything be done about this? — Mrs. T. F.

Dear Mrs. F.:

I have a feeling that your doctor probably said that your daughter has a "serous" middle ear infection rather than a "serious" one.

Many years ago, before the antibiotics were discovered, children would develop an infection of the middle ear. Then the pus would break through the eardrum and discharge through the ear canal.

Today, because of the use of the antibiotics, the fluid in the middle ear becomes thick and has the consistency of honey and cannot drain spontaneously.

This fluid collects in the middle ear (on the other side of the eardrum) causing pain, a sense of pressure and particularly, a marked hearing loss.

The treatment for a "serous otitis media" is to remove the adenoids and to open the eardrum in order to release the fluid. In some instances a small polyethylene tube is placed in the opening of the eardrum and left there for a long period of time to prevent the recurrence of the collection of fluid.

Certainly, you've given the antibiotics and "conservative handling" enough time to control the repeated infections and to break up the cycle of incessant incapacitation.

Ask your doctor to refer you to an ear, nose, and throat doctor for an evaluation of this problem. It is a frequent one. Following the removal of the adenoids and the tonsils, results are most gratifying. You will find that there will be an immediate decrease in the frequency and severity of these infections.

Is there a difference between "active" immunity to diseases and "natural" immunity? Why do some people withstand some infections better than others? — Miss S. D.

Dear Miss D.:

A "natural" immunity refers to the kind that one is born with and inherits from the mother. This type of immunity is of genetic and racial significance and plays a very important role against the threat of some diseases.

"Active" immunity is achieved when a person has recovered from an infection. The body develops protective forces that resist a recurrence of the same type of infectious disease. Scarlet feaver, mumps, diphtheria, and chicken pox are only a few of the diseases that confer permanent active immunity.

Active immunity can also be produced by an injection of a vaccine. Smallpox and polio vaccines are examples of this method of producing active immunity.

'INDEPENDENCE' SOUGHT

SIBASA, South Africa (Reuter) — Another black homeland, Venda, has asked the South African government for full independence.

The small area in the northeast corner of South Africa, with a population of 270,000, is the home of the Venda nation which consists of 27 tribes. Venda has been internally self-governing since 1973.

Chief Minister Chief Patrick Mphephu asked in parliament here Wednesday that the South African government grant the homeland full independence.

The South African government is expected to welcome the application for independence. Two of South Africa's nine black homelands, Transkei and Bophuthatswana, have been proclaimed fully independent states in the last two years, in line with the South African government's apartheid policy of separate development of the races.

So far, South Africa is the only country to have recognized the independence of the two homelands.

South African black leaders generally denounce the homelands policy, saying it is a way of denying blacks their rightful share of the country's wealth and their political rights.

Big Push on for Gas, Oil

VANCOUVER (CP) — Exploration work for gas and oil in British Columbia is expected to hit record highs this year with more money being spent on drilling and more jobs being created than ever before, statistics show.

A record $513 million is budgeted to be spent this year by B.C. oil and gas producers, compared with $484 million last year and $273.6 million in 1976.

A total of 309 wells were drilled in 1977 compared with 175 in 1976.

A record 60 drilling rigs are working in fields in the B.C. oil patch that extends north of Dawson Creek, 650 kilometres north of here; and northwest to the Rocky Mountain foothills. The patch is about 640 kilometres long and 400 kilometres wide.

The sale of oil and gas rights also is booming.

In the 1977-1978 fiscal year the B.C. government received a record $198.5 million in bids for petroleum rights on Crown land, compared with $45.6 million the previous year.

"The huge amounts paid for these rights shows the competitive nature of the industry," O. C. Windrem, chairman of the B.C. division of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said in an interview.

Windrem credited higher field prices adopted by the provincial government last fall for stimulating interest by the private sector in B.C. petroleum exploration. The price paid for new-found gas was increased to $1.03 a thousand cubic feet (MCF) starting Nov. 1, 1977, from 85 cents a MCF.

But while gas is being found and produced in increasing quantities, oil finds are declining.

"Current oil finds could produce about 10 to 15 per cent of the province's present needs," said George Lechner, chairman of the B.C. Petroleum Corp.

The new fields, near Fort St. John, 700 kilometres north of here, are producing 4,000 to 6,000 barrels a day.

About 25 per cent of B.C.'s current oil needs are supplied by wells in the province, about 70 per cent comes from Alberta and five per cent is imported.

B.C. is producing 40,000 barrels of oil a day, but about 150,000 barrels is consumed in the province daily.

The gas-supply situation is different, with B.C. using about 45 per cent of the gas it produces, and exporting the remainder to the United States. At the present and projected demand, there is at least a 20-year assured domestic gas supply in the province.

In 1977, 1.2 trillion gross cubic feet of natural gas were added to the province's store in terms of added reserves and new finds in existing reserves.

B.C. now produces more than 300 billion MFC of gas a year. A three-bedroom home in southern B.C. that has a basement and is heated by gas, including hot water, uses an average of 150 MCF a year.

Most of the exploration work is taking place in the Fort St. John area, where 65 operators are working. Most are affiliated with United States oil companies.

Statistics show that each time one of 60 drilling rigs working the area begins boring into the earth, 60 new jobs are created. The payroll on the rigs is estimated at $360,000 a day.

Some of the jobs end after a short drilling season of about 90 days, but the rest continue as the rigs move south during the summer.

Most drilling is limited to the winter months when the muskeg is frozen hard enough to support the heavy rigs, backup equipment and buildings involved.

"But this coming summer we expect about 40 rigs to be operating in this area," said John Lineham, associate deputy minister of the B.C. ministry of mines and petroleum resources.

Rat Repeller Banned As Totally Useless

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency today stopped the sale of two types of devices designed to keep away rats, mice and other pests by sending out signals which, among other things, interfere with their sex lives.

The agency said the devices don't work.

Involved in the action are the "Amigo Electronic Repeller" and the "Amigo Electronic Repeller Phase 2 Model C-100," which retail for from $300 to $500. They are made by Mira Manufacturing Co., Pine Valley, Calif.

"EPA tests on the two Amigos found that they had no meaningful effect on the eating, drinking or reproductive habits of rats," the agency said.

"Labelling for these devices includes false and misleading claims," it added. "For example, labelling for the Amigo Electronic Repeller says that it 'sends out a protective frequency to create a front-line shield' keeping ants, mice, rats, gophers and moles away from protected areas.

"Elsewhere the same label states, 'The creatures will stay where they are, not eating or breeding, and unable to tolerate the repelling frequency they will go dormant, never to leave the area'," EPA said.

The agency issued an order to the manufcturer to stop the sale, as well as to one distributor, Unity Systems Gulf Inc., Metairie, La. In addition it said a second distributor, Key Milling Co., Clay Centre, Kan., has agreed to recall the Amigos which it has sold.

"Other models of the Amigo may still be on sale around the country," the agency said. It added that it will test them and other similar devices which operate on the same principle to see if they are being falsely promoted.

The action was taken under the federal pesticides law which gives EPA the power to police the labeling of anti-pest products.

The Amigo uses an electromagnet which emits low level electronic waves, the EPA said. Some are intended for indoor use, others for outdoors where they are promoted for use in areas ranging from two to 20 acres.

"After a 14-week test for each device, EPA researchers found no significant differences between the eating, drinking and reproductive behavior to the repeller-exposed rats versus the control rats," the agency said.

PILOT GETS BLAME

NEW DELHI (AP) — The New Year's Day crash of an Air-India jumbo jet plane off Bombay was caused by pilot error and the possible malfunctioning of an altitude indicator, according to a report on the mishap released Wednesday.

The report said there was no evidence that sabotage led to the accident which claimed 213 lives, making it India's worst air disaster.

"The flight crew (was) unable to assess the situation and establish the correct attitude of the aircraft within the short time available," it said. The Boeing 747 went down at sea several minutes after takeoff from Bombay's Santa Cruz airport.

The report was submitted to Justice M. N. Chandurker of the Bombay high court who is heading an inquiry into the air disaster.

Queen Mary for Sale Again

LONG BEACH, Calif. (Reuter) — The former ocean liner Queen Mary, a constant financial drain on this southern California port city in its 11 years here as a tourist attraction, is up for sale again.

City officials confirmed today they have offered the 81,000-ton former Cunard liner to the Hyatt Hotels Corp. which operates the only profitable part of the Queen Mary, a 400-room hotel aboard the ship.

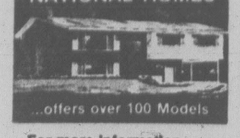

The Los Angeles Times said today Long Beach was asking $30 million for the ship but city officials said no firm price had yet been discussed.

They said one condition was that the Queen with its black hull and three red and black funnels remain where it is, dominating Long Beach's harbor skyline.

Long Beach bought the liner for $3.45 million in 1967. It hoped to turn it into a viable tourist attraction with three million visitors a year but the number of visitors has not gone above a million a year.

City agencies have had to spend $1.8 million a year to subsidize its operation. The total bill for purchase and conversion of the ship was $63 million, paid out of city oil revenues.

Takeovers 'Pervasive'

TORONTO (CP) — The new executive director of the Committee for an Independent Canada says the U.S. economic takeover of Canada has become so pervasive that no area escapes it.

Jim Conrad, 47, said in an interview, most Canadians are aware of the role of the giant multinationals in the petroleum, manufacturing and mining industries but do not realize the extent of foreign penetration in nearly all sectors of the Canadian economy.

Conrad, engineer, businessman and educationist who left the Canadian Federation of Business to join the committee this month, said he hopes to breathe new life into the economic nationalistic movement.

The committee has been declining since 1970 when it was launched by such high-profile Canadians as Walter Gordon, Claude Ryan, Jack McClelland, E. A. Goodman and Flora MacDonald.

But Conrad sees changes ahead, including a doubling of membership within a year.

The old concept of the committee as a populist movement that would automatically draw concerned Canadians is not working, he said.

"There is no doubt there are tens of thousands of them out there who are concerned but we have to deliver a program."

Conrad said he finds particularly upsetting the attitude that foreign domination and control is a minor matter compared to the current rate of unemployment.

High unemployment is due to high foreign ownership, he said.

Too large a portion of the capital gains realized in Canada were accruing to foreigners because of the government's stand that ownership doesn't matter.

Conrad said he doesn't ascribe to the mountain-top approach of regaining control of the economy.

"Buying out Imperial Oil won't prove anything; won't change anything because there are literally thousands of firms in all spheres of activities owned and controlled outside this country."

Instead of trying to buy back the economy, the committee should set a clear objective that ownership matters, that Canadian resources are to be used only to enhance Canadian ownership.

Conrad said he would like to see an economic environment, through tax reform, that would encourage ownership so more people will own their own homes, farms and small businesses and buy more stock in the larger Canadian companies.

Still no Ransom Demand for Charlie Chaplin's Body

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — One month after the bizarre theft of Charlie Chaplin's body, both the family and Swiss authorities said today they still have no idea who was responsible.

A series of anonymous letters and telephone calls from people claiming to have robbed the actor's grave stopped one week ago, police said. All proved to be "cranks or sick."

Chaplin died on Christmas Day, at the age of 88. He was buried Dec. 27 in the tiny cemetery of Corsier, the village overlooking Lake Geneva where he and his wife Oona lived for 25 years.

The night of March 2 the grave, marked only by a simple wooden cross because the gravestone was not ready, was opened and the plain oak coffin and Chaplin's body taken away.

At first both police and the family were sure there would be a ransom demand although Oona said she would refuse to make any payment as that "would be ridiculous."

"We don't think, after all this time, that a ransom demand will now be made," said the Chaplin family lawyer, Jean-Felix Paschoud, of Lausanne.

Family spokesmen and police said they agree with this.

But rumors and conjecture are rife although none of them are supported by any concrete evidence.

One rumor circulating in Corsier and nearby communities is that Cahplin, before his death, made it known he would like to be buried in the 35 acres of grounds of his large residence, the Manoir-de-Ban.

Burial in ones property is difficult under Swiss law and requires special authorization which takes a long time to obtain.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is a very tough one to play correctly. When it arose in a rubber-bridge game, our South declarer went down at his game contract. In the postmortem analysis, it was revealed that the contract could have been fulfilled.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ 10 8 6 3 ♡ A K ◇ A K ♣ Q J 9 8 5
WEST ♠ J 2 ♡ 9 5 4 ◇ 10 7 6 5 2 ♣ K 6 4		EAST ♠ A Q 9 7 5 ♡ Q J 8 2 ◇ J 9 3 ♣ 2
	SOUTH ♠ K 4 ♡ 10 7 6 3 ◇ Q 8 4 ♣ A 10 7 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

East played low on West's opening lead of the spade jack, and South's king captured the trick. On the bidding, East, rather than West, figured to have the club king. However, declarer could afford to lose a club trick to East, since dummy's remaining 10-8-6 of spades would prevent East from cashing more than two spade tricks. But he couldn't afford to lose a club trick to West, since a spade return by West through dummy might enable East to cash four spade tricks.

So, to minimize the danger of West obtaining the lead, at trick two South laid down his ace of clubs to guard against West's possession of the singleton king. To trick three declarer led another club, hoping that East had the king. But West won the trick and the return of his remaining spade trapped the board's ten, and enabled East to cash four spade tricks.

South was correct in his handling of the club suit. However, by that time it was too late. Declarer did not consider matters carefully enough at trick one. He should have allowed West's jack of spades to win the first trick. A second spade lead would then be taken by East's ace, felling South's king. Dummy's remaining 10-8 of spades would now effectively prevent East from making more than his queen of spades.

Upon regaining the lead, South would enter dummy and lead the queen of clubs for a finesse. If East had the king, by repeated finesses South would make five club tricks. And if West had the king, he would win the trick (as he did). But he would have no spade to play back. Declarer would now end up making two heart tricks, three dimonds and four clubs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, April 1
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Shakeup due in habit pattern; what was taken for granted is subject to abrupt change. Decision-maker is not certain about plans. Know it and ride with tide. Capricorn, Aquarius individuals figure in scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Contributions, appeals, messages and calls command more-than-usual attention. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently. Check travel plans. Lines of communication may not be all they should be. Secret is revealed. Discretion takes a holiday.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent harmony within family circle. Money questions relate to partnership, marriage. Be aware of costs, legal green or red lights. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio figure in scenario. Where and how you live and how much it costs become major issues.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lie low, go slow, be sure concerning marital status, legal ties. Define terms, streamline procedures, get facts as they exist. Avoid wishful thinking. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently — so does the number 7. One who talks a big game could be whistling in the dark. Be aware of it!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone plays April Fool with you. Go along with the joke. Humor now is your great ally. One who serves you, and depends upon you, will make a pretty speech. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently — and so does the number 8.

VIRGO (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Involvement, recognition, creative outlet — these are spotlighted. Finish rather than begin — enlarge horizons. You do have right to be optimistic. What had been a detriment will be transformed into an asset. Aries, Libra figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New approach is necessary where problem-solving is concerned. Leo, Aquarius persons play key roles. Emphasis on security, rebuilding, eliminating safety hazards. Stick to rules. You'll get chance soon to imprint individual style, policy. Meantime, gather material and become familiar with it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid unnecessary travel. Directions, instructions tend now to be garbled. Key is to reinforce, to reaffirm, to reconstruct and retrench. Some will be envious and accuse you of being stubborn. Hold your ground. You discover what you need right where you stand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Element of luck or timing becomes evident. You make money because you are at right place at right time. Gemini — and another Sagittarian — figure prominently. You locate what was missing. Celebration could be on agenda.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A part of your anchor floats away. Escape hatch is available. You'll have opportunity to step aside, to go around an obstacle. Steady pace, approach, greater degree of concentration adds up to winning combination. Import of message will be clarified.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Secrets are revealed. One who had been confined is again free-and-easy. Fears, doubts can be blasted into oblivion. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently — so does the number 5. Yes, the change is necessary and will be good for you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on domestic adjustment, learning to live in way that creates harmony. Friends, desires, special considerations grab centre-of-attention. Emotional responses dominate logic. You could be in and out of love in a flash.

IF APRIL 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a pioneer, an innovator, stubborn and temperamental, skeptical and affectionate Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. May could be your most significant month of 1978, a year which features travel, social activity, unusual opportunities, the obliteration of emotional burden which had become a constant, gloomy companion.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Today we have a Magic Square to mark this not quite new year. It's a sequence of consecutive positive numbers arranged in solid square formation so that each column, each row and each of the two diagonals will add up to the same Magic Total.

That magic Total happens to be 1978 more than the smallest number in our sequence, so what must the greatest number be?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: LIMES was 48521.

Music Scores Top Marks in Beggar's Opera

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

When the curtain rises on The Beggar's Opera, the McPherson Playhouse stage is filled with a rollicking crowd of "ladies of the town" and "gentlemen of the streets," cleverly costumed and lit against an anonymous but appropriately shabby backdrop.

While we take in the Hogarthian picture, a false proscenium of the period descends soundlessly from the flies to frame the group. Then, as the group breaks and divides for the start of the operatic action, more scenery comes swiftly into place to establish Mr. Peachum's abode, props are whisked into place and away we go.

Or should go.

Unfortunately that first exhilarating momentum is not sustained — at least it was not on opening night. Repeat performances Friday and Saturday may see the overall tempo improve and, if so, audiences will enjoy a show in which the larger part of the tedium will have been removed and the playing time will be shorter.

This production by the Vancouver Island Opera Society has a number of virtues. High on the list I would place George Corwin's clear, musicianly, well-cued direction of orchestra and ensemble, and the lyrical sound of excellent musicians in the pit which, if not always ideally balanced as a group, balance perfectly with the on-stage cast.

Carole Sabiston's costumes and Tom Taggert's set designs are complimented by Larry Eastick's lighting (although I would have liked a little more beige tone in the lighting to enhance the effect of a period engraving).

The voices generally, and particularly those of Peter Bradley, Olga Grikis, Marilyn Wuis, Karen Smith and David McIntyre, are consistently fine and so is the ensemble in singing the melodically polygenous score.

But there are serious reservations concerning the over-all success of this show and they rest with two important elements — the key personality of McHeath, and the stylized farce which is stage director John Heath's basically correct interpretation.

In realization, however, it is not uniform, sometimes embarking on the burlesque and at other times quite disappearing into an amorphous blend of the natural and artificial. But this almost-expected situation is not as serious as the fact that in imposing this style on singers who are not basically actors; he has evolved a performance that is often so studied and self-conscious that the vital juices of a gutsy and mildly raunchy tale are lost. This is the main reason large sections of the piece are a dead weight on the audience's attention.

Having said that, however, full credit must be given to Heath for the neatly facile, well-drilled staging technique, and for inventiveness in stage business even if it occasionally becomes overrepetitive.

The trouble with Garth Gislason — entrusted with the role of McHeath, the poor man's Don Giovanni — is not his voice. He produces a full smooth tone when he allows its natural resonance to appear and is technically at ease, although there is a tendency for his tone and words to become murky when phrases curve down into a pianissimo.

However, Gislason is not, and must know that he is not, an actor. He has not a resilient body and lacks the most average physical means of expression. Now that might not matter too much in some opera roles. But McHeath is central to the plot of The Beggar's Opera; he must display a positive and engagingly macho personality, a swaggering magnetism that is as irresistible to every female as it is dominant to his gang. Without that quality the core of the story is seriously undermined.

In this production the male choruses are highlights to which the entrances of McHeath apply a dim-out. The compelling and enjoyable performances are provided in the main by Bradley and McIntyre, well seconded by Grikis, Wuis, Smith and Mary Copland as doxie Jenny Diver.

It's Bliss To 'Speak'

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

What are Bliss symbols?

Victorians will have an opportunity next week to find out about this unique visual communication system which allows the verbally handicapped to communicate effectively with society.

To increase the public's awareness of this visual method of expression, Victoria Mayor Mike Young has designated the Week April 2-8 as Bliss Symbols Week.

It will feature a program sponsored by the Society for the Alternative Communication for Handicapped Individuals and will include a display and demonstration in the Hillside Mall, April 6-8.

At the display, Victorians will see how symbols provide a total communication system through an organization of pictorial, ideographic, and arbitary symbols which can be combined and recombined with other elements to form new concepts.

At present five trained instructors from the Greater Victoria Blisssymbolics program work with professionsals in 16 different Victoria agencies to provide direct instruction to handicapped people.

An example is Lou, a 24-year-old Victoria women who is handicapped by cerebral palsy. Two years ago her communication was confined to the use of eye movements to indicate yes and no responses to questions.

Since she learned the Bliss symbol system, she can now share her thoughts and ideas with her friends and family.

It has in fact changed her whole life and she is able to continue her formal education.

Although the Bliss symbol system was first establish in Toronto, the Victoria program started in 1976 has gained international recognition for its unique organization and implementation of service.

It has provided assistance to more than 65 handicapped people and has trained parents and instructors as well.

The Victoria program was funded by federal grants which are expected to be cut off on June 2.

Program co-ordinator Sachi Tamura said applications for further grants have been submitted to both the federal and provincial governments but so far no commitments have been received.

"But we are confident that we will receive some support," she added.

The Bliss system of communication was developed by Charles Bliss, who while working in China, noticed that while the Chinese might have difficulty in understanding each other's dialect, they had no trouble reading for their script was based on standardized symbols.

While the Bliss system was praised by language experts in the sixties, it was not adopted as a world symbol language and came near to being forgotten.

"It was just by chance that it was picked up by the Ontario Crippled Children's Centre in the 1970's," Tamura says.

"Staff members were searching for a method that would allow non-speaking physically-handicapped children to communicate. They were not satisfied with the systems in existence and were about to create one of their own when they discovered they symbol system of Bliss."

Picking the Best Seed

The choice of vegetable seeds for sowing is as important as the growing of them. To get full enjoyment we should not only grow many that we already like or find interesting but also be reasonably assured they will provide the nutrition values we seek.

Statistics from Canadian federal surveys have shown a sad calcium lack in a huge percentage of Canadians. Some authorities trace this to neglect in our consuming enough raw and cooked leafy vegetables.

Among those most liked and known, are broccoli, cabbage, and lettuce. These three can be used in succession every day for variety, either raw in salads or briefly steamed.

When we grow the plants from seed in our garden or allotment we have the chance to grow the best, that is, varieties perfect for use the same day of gathering but which are not suited for packing to send long distances.

Green Leaf Lettuce is known to be higher in vitamins than head lettuce with most of its bulk solid and colorless. Sowing seed of varieties such as Buttercrunch, Bibb, Ruby, and Black-seeded Simpson provides delicately flavored, crisp, thick-textured leaves and in some, a tiny heart. Sow only a couple of dozen seeds on one day; when they are ready to thin out, sow another batch, and continue through the season.

The green broccoli is high on the nutrition and flavor list for cooking, and salad making with raw florets. Italian Sprouting and Green Mountain are two varieties suitable for this district.

Sow seeds now and have the little plants out before the end of April. Remember a dusting of lime in the soil when seeding and when planting. This helps prevent clubroot, but will not cure it.

Among the many cabbage types available, the Early Jersey Wakefield is a delicately flavored early summer variety with a small green butter-yellow head and edible green wrapping leaves. Copenhagen Market is reliable for fall use. Best flavor when used at moderate to small size. These are both delicious as salad.

In the cabbage family is Scotch Curled Kale for late fall and winter; more highly rated than any cabbage, and lacking the typical cabbage odor. Freshly cut cabbage however does not have the penetrating cooking odor as does storage cabbage.

While all these fresh-from-the-garden cabbage types are desirable in salads, other more typically salad vegetables should be sown in addition to lettuce.

For quick returns try young leaves from a sowing of white turnip, Tokio Cross or Early Snoball. They come quickly from seed and continue producing for months. The young roots can be eaten when the size of a golfball; those left in the ground, never seem to quit producing young edible leaves, a most nutritious crop.

Corn-salad, Curly Endive, and Cos Lettuce, each quite different from the others and from conventional lettuce, repay small sowings made in April. They like cooler weather than head lettuce, so take advantage of this by sowing a few seeds now.

Endive and Corn-salad should be sown again in August for fall and winter. This late sowing takes you through spring in a sheltered position to supply delicious salads until May when the first of the April sowings are thinned for using.

The vegetables mentioned are the backbone of leafy green food with high ratings of vitamins and minerals, for the calcium in these is "available" — not locked up by high levels of oxalic acid as in a few other green vegetables.

Grow the best to enjoy only the best.

IMAGINE!
Your friends drop in and they will be unable to shake your hands and say hello because the view took their speech away. You'll show them the Coastal Range in the distance. Gordon Head, University, Mt. Baker, Mt. Tolmie, the City, Olympics, Cedar Hill Golf Course, and the Sooke Hills. Truly 360-degree view. Your friends will be green with envy; so much so that they won't even see the great house with super size living room, family room, dining room, master bedroom with ensuite of imperial proportions and its own private deck. They probably will even miss seeing the "in ground" swimming pool — well, that way they get the green off their faces. A bargain at $124,500. Call:

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Moro's Party Rejects Ransom

ROME (CP) — The Italian government will not ransom kidnapped political leader Aldo Moro by freeing 13 Red Brigades terrorists on trial in Turin, the Christian Democratic party says.

"It is not possible to accept the blackmail coming from the Red Brigades," the government party — of which Moro is president — said in response to a letter from Moro in which he hinted that freedom for the terrorists would be the price for his release.

The statement was issued after day-long meetings between Premier Giulio Andreotti and other party leaders. The government also denied a newspaper report that it was considering offering a reward of $1.2 million for information leading to the arrest of the kidnappers.

Meanwhile, French police have arrested an Italian wanted in his home country as a member of the Red Brigades, informed sources in Paris said today.

Antonio Bellavita, 40, is among the men whose names were circulated to police throughout Europe by Italian authorities following the kidnapping of Moro, the sources said.

Bellavita was arrested by police investigating a political murder in France, the sources said.

Bellavita was detained Thursday with five French extremists by police investigating the murder on March 18 of French rightist leader Francois Duprat whose car was blown apart by a bomb on a road in Normandy, the sources said.

The Italian is wanted on several counts by the public prosecutor's office in Turin and was jailed at Fresnes prison pending an extradition request from Italian authorities, they said.

The Communists and other parties urged the government to maintain a firm stand and not to barter with the kidnappers.

Unita, the Communist Party newspaper, said in an editorial: "The democratic regime cannot give in to terrorism. To give in could only open the way to a crescendo of new blackmail."

Deficit Sinks U.S. Dollar

LONDON (AP) — The highest United States monthly trade deficit in history sent the U.S. dollar dropping against major world currencies on European foreign exchanges Friday.

The commerce department announcement in Washington a record $4.5-billion deficit for February caused the dollar to fall sharply in Frankfurt, Paris, Zurich, Milan, Amsterdam and London.

Gold bullion prices jumped by as much as $4 an ounce as the dollar declined.

It was the 21st consecutive month that U.S. trade with the rest of the world was in deficit, and it surpassed the record $3.6-billion deficit of June 1977. Money dealers had anticipated a February figure closer to the $2.4-billion January deficit.

European dealers said the news could start another run on the U.S. currency after two weeks of relative calm, although they said firm support for the dollar from the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank could avert a new crisis.

The dollar has been the world's problem currency for most of 1977 and 1978, largely because of America's big import bill, particularly for foreign oil.

But U.S. officials noted that a weaker dollar made American goods cheaper to sell abroad, and foreign imports more expensive in the United States. Theoretically this should have helped to level off the U.S. balance of trade.

That it was not doing so — as February's figures showed — pushed the dollar down.

The American currency had staged a slight recovery against the Japanese yen when Tokyo markets closed earlier in the day, and it was only marginally weak in Europe prior to the trade announcement.

ABDUCTED STUDENTS BACK IN RHODESIA

PLUMTREE, Rhodesia (UPI) — Most of the more than 400 black mission school pupils abducted to Botswana by black insurgents returned to Rhodesia today, thirsty and hungry and saying they were happy to have been spared lives as guerrilla fighters.

Their return was aided by the government of Botswana, which dealt the guerrillas it supports an embarrassing blow by saying it wanted no part in abductions.

Looking haggard and drained, the youngsters kidnapped Wednesday night began crossing the Ramokgwebane River bridge marking the Rhodesia-Botswana border.

Botswana's head of security, David Mophuthing, said all but 48 of the 432 people seized at southwest Rhodesia's Tegwani mission chose to return home.

In Rhodesia, a spokesman for the British Methodist Church, which operates the mission, said among those taken were 420 male and female pupils between the ages of 13 an 20.

Once across the bridge, the youngsters clambered onto Rhodesian military transport vehicles for the short ride to the border town of Plumtree.

Birds Suffer From Oil Spill

BREST, France (AP) — The bird kill caused by the Amoco Cadiz oil spill off the French coast has been a local disaster and a European tragedy, a British ornithologist says.

But Peter Hope Jones said that despite the scale of the ecological damage from the worst spill in history, no species is threatened with extinction. He said fears that tens of thousands of birds would die were also exaggerated.

Officials said the last of the supertanker's 64.7 million gallons of oil had been expelled from the wreck by the second day of aerial bombardment with depth charges Thursday. This was ordered to get all the oil out so the cleanup of 150 kilometres of oil-covered Brittany coastline would not be prolonged.

By Thursday, 1,051 dead birds had been taken to the bird hospital set up hastily in derelict huts in Brest, and veterinarians were treating 53 survivors. Another centre near the Sept-Iles bird sanctuary on the north Brittany coast reported about 800 dead birds.

Oil Port Inquiry All Over

VANCOUVER (CP) — The West Coast Oil Ports Inquiry was formally terminated Thursday with a report from commissioner Dr. Andrew Thompson urging all levels of government to give priority to control of existing oil tanker traffic on the British Columbia coast.

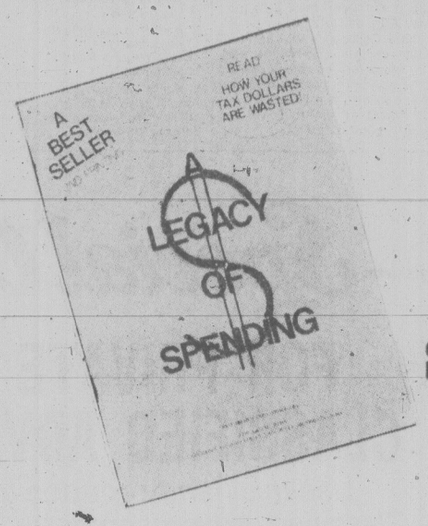

"Time is on your side only until a spill occurs," he said. "An Amoco Cadiz could ground in Rosario Strait tomorrow."

Thompson was referring to a recent supertanker spill off the coast of France. Rosario Strait, in Puget Sound, is the passage used by tankers on their way to Cherry Point, Wash., 20 kilometres south of the Canada-United States boundary.

Thompson said negotiations between Canada and the U.S. on a traffic management system for the Strait of Juan de Fuca, between the Olympic Peninsula of Washington State and southern Vancouver Island, should cover the entire range of oil tanker traffic issues, including tanker safety standards and reciprocal oil spill compensation laws.

He also urged local governments, such as the Gulf Islands Trust, to investigate regional capabilities of responding to oil spills and to assess what damages are likely to occur.

Thompson was appointed last year to study the social, environmental and economic impacts of oil port proposals for the west coast.

Task Force Set On Health, MDs

A task force has been set up to study the distribution of doctors and the cost of health care in B.C.

Health Minister Bob McClelland said today the six-member medical manpower committee will be chaired by former Socred health minister Wes Black.

Black will be paid $17,500 for a six-month contract and $150 a day after that.

The committee will also probe the per capita cost of medical care in B.C. which last year was $102 compared to the national average of $83.50.

B.C. may be overstocked with physicians and overserviced, McClelland said.

Physicians and health officials have tried to solve the problem in the past with little success, McClelland said.

Black said the uneven distribution of doctors — especially specialists in rural areas — is the number one problem in the delivery of health services.

McClelland said the oversupply of certain specialists in the Lower Mainland and Greater Victoria mean those physicians are not working at their optimum, with the result that they do not have enough opportunity to refine their skills.

Vice-chairman of the advisory committee is Phyllis Whittome, a registered nurse on the board of the Cowichan hospital and a former president of the B.C. Health Association.

Four other persons from the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, the B.C. Medical Association, the ministry of health, and the health education advisory council will be named to the committee.

Black, who served in the legislature from 1952 to until his defeat in 1972, said the committee will hold its first meetings soon.

He said it is likely the committee will hold public hearings throughout the province.

One earlier proposal to even the spread of doctors was to insist all physicians moving to B.C. serve a term in the north.

A human rights board of inquiry later ruled this was a contravention of human rights.

McClelland said he would like to have the committee's recommendations within the next six months but he has put no time limit on their task.

He said Black is well qualified for the job and that the medical insurance scheme now in effect in B.C. was founded by him.

CABBIE SHOT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cab driver Thomas Man Tang, 26, of suburban Burnaby was in poor condition today after being shot in the head by his passenger.

Police said they believed Tang was shot after he refused to hand over $60 or $70.

SORRY ABOUT THAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hank Obester, who works for a city bulldozer firm, was demolishing a city house Thursday when he noticed the electricity was still connected.

He was wrecking the wrong house.

Johnny Walker, owner of the bulldozing firm, said he and Obester are sick about the mistake, the first time it's happened in the company's 15 years.

Walker said he hopes to persuade Williams to allow him to complete the demolition and haul the wreckage away free. He has been unable to contact Williams in Hawaii.

There was no estimate of the value of the house, a rental property that was vacant.

Yawns and Attacks Greet Throne Speech

Political reaction to Thursday's throne speech outlining the Social Credit government's programs in the coming session ranged from Liberal leader Gordon Gibson's yawn to mock indignation and an election challenge from NDP leader Dave Barrett.

"Typical. I'm underwhelmed," Gibson said.

The throne speech according to Gibson, was little more than free television publicity for the government.

"Without a doubt the worst in 18 years," Barrett said.

The NDP leader said there isn't a shred of evidence in the speech to indicate there is relief in sight for B.C.'s more than 100,000 unemployed.

Barrett urged the government to immediately begin negotiations with Alaska and the U.S. governments to push the B.C. railway through to Alaska to open up the north and create jobs.

He called the speech tame and lacking substance although he said he was pleased the government recognizes the main problem facing the province is unemployment.

The newly elected MLA for Oak Bay proposed a three per cent reduction in sales tax as

Tory Bug Case ... Two Charged

OTTAWA (CP)—Three criminal charges each have been laid against William Sandiford and Daniel McGarry, partners in a Toronto firm which said it found bugging devices on Opposition Leader Joe Clark's telephone and in the office of Conservative MP Elmer MacKay, police said today.

The two men will appear in provincial court here Monday to face charges of public mischief, illegal posession of listening devices and attempt to defraud the Conservative Party.

The charges followed a raid Thursday on the Toronto offices of Uniserv Sound and Signal Inc.

Ottawa police were called in to investigate after statements made last Oct. 31 by Clark and MacKay that alleged bugging devices were found in their Parliamentary offices.

MacKay, who represents the Nova Scotia riding of Central Nova, said Friday that he is surprised to learn of the charges. He stunned the Commons last Oct. 31 when he announced that a small, operative electronic listening device had been found in the bottom of an armchair in his office.

MacKay reiterated past statements that Sandiford and McGarry happened to be in Ottawa that day on another case and offered to electronically "sweep" MacKay's office for bugs. But he added today that they were not paid.

Later Oct. 31 the same men found what they described as a suspicious black foreign object in a telephone in a conference room in Clark's office.

Their report said the device was "capable of being used as an eavesdropping device," but Bell Canada investigators said it was standard equipment.

Centurion is a far-flung organization with branches in more than a dozen cities, including Europe, a staff of about 500, and a reported income last year of some $12 million.

Clark's office would not confirm a report in the Ottawa Citizen that the Conservative party was billed $13,500 for the sweep of Clark's office. The newspaper quoted a Conservative party spokesman as saying the party negotiated the bill downward but had not yet received Uniserv's final bill.

Ottawa Seeking Long Beach Camp

Monday Night Winner?

Critics admired the energy and charm of Travolta and he has been nominated best actor for the annual Academy Awards.

The Times and CJVI are offering a chance on a trip for two to Hollywood plus 10 major secondary prizes for those correctly predicting the Oscar winners for best actor, best actress and best movie. Official entry form is in the advertisement on page 16.

All entries must be received by 4 p.m. Monday to be eligible.

Travolta was the only nomination for Saturday Night Fever, although many critics had spoken highly of the music by the brothers Gibb, the Bee Gees.

The Oscars will be announced in a telecast Monday starting at 7 p.m.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government is negotiating the purchase of a privately-owned campsite at Long Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island, even though it admits it could build a more appropriate campsite at lower cost on its own property.

Parks Canada, however, is desperate for camping spaces in the area, and is looking seriously at a campground for which developer Bert Braiden is said to be asking $3.5 million.

"Braiden has us where he wanted us," says Frank Camp, superintendent of the wilderness Pacific Rim park which adjoins Braiden's campsite. "He is pretty well in a position to command the price tag he wants."

MLA Robert Skelly (NDP—Alberni) said the situation is indicative of the whole approach to development of the park which takes in Long Beach.

"The whole way Pacific Rim park was conceived was a lousy use of taxpayers money," says Skelly. "Braiden's property is just one example of exorbitant prices which the government is forced to pay for private properties in its attempts to buy up every chunk for the park overnight.

"People in this area are disgusted with the whole thing. I've heard numerous complaints about the esthetics of the campsite itself."

Braiden, the millionaire owner of an Alberta oil construction company, first proposed his campsite two years ago on 217 acres bordering the north end of the park, six kilometres south of Tofino.

"Parks Canada encouraged Braiden to build and said that 'if you develop campsites we won't'," said David Street, assistant direc-

QUAKES REPORTED

Associated Press — A moderate earthquake rocked a wide and heavily populated section of the Puget Sound region early today, and another shook an area 115 kilometres northwest of Anchorage on Thursday.

There were no injuries or damage reported in either one.

In Alaska the quake registered 5.4 on the Richter scale. The Seattle-area quake registered 4.2 and appeared to be centred about halfway between Tacoma, on the east side of the sound, and Bremerton, on the west.

He'll Keep On Working

James Parsons is operating his one-man View Royal garage just as he's done for 30 years despite the fact he won $100,000 in the last recent Express lottery.

"I don't plan to retire. I enjoy my work too much," he said in an interview today.

"I'm in my early 60s now but I haven't given much thought about retiring. I'm not sure I would enjoy it."

Parsons, of 488 Walter Avenue, said he was still a little stunned by the windfall.

"It takes a bit of getting used to. I've only bought a few lottery tickets, about a dozen, I guess."

The only celebration might be a trip but he'll first have to find someone to run the garage.

Parsons said he had hoped to avoid publicity about the win but sighed resignedly when informed the Winnipeg lottery office publicizes the names of all known winners.

"I hope the phone doesn't start ringing about this. I really don't want to be bothered with a lot of calls."

"We're very conservative people," she said. "We may take a little trip as a result of this but we won't rush into anything. It takes a little while to get over the shock."

WASHINGTON — Two prominent Canadian labor leaders have received personal salary increases in excess of the federal wage guidelines which apply to most rank and file union members in Canada, according to documents filed with the U.S. department of labor.

The two are Senator Ed Lawson of Vancouver, Canadian head of the Teamsters union, and Dennis McDermott of Toronto, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers and a candidate for the presidency of the Canadian Labor Congress at the CLC's weekend convention in Quebec City.

The U.S. labor department documents show that Senator Lawson, who was the only major labor leader to endorse the Trudeau government's wage and price control program when it was introduced in 1975, received a personal salary increase from the Teamsters in 1976 of 218 per cent, or $39,184.33.

In 1975, according to the documents, Senator Lawson received a total of $26,805.42 as a 12th vice-president of the U.S.based International Teamsters Union. Of this total, $18,000 was in the form of salary; $5,897.50 in "allowances," and $2,907.92 for hotel and restaurant expenses.

In 1976, the documents show, the B.C. union leader received a total of $70,817.08 from the Teamsters in his capacity as 10th vice-president, international representative and conference chairman.

Of this total, Lawson received $57,184.33 as salary; $8,915.00 in "allowances;" $1,960.74 for hotel and restaurant expenses; and $2,757.01 for transportation.

Part of the 1976 salary increase may have been to compensate the senator for his apparent promotion from 12th to 10th vice-president and the assumption of expanded duties. The documents do not, however, disclose how the additional compensation was calculated.

McDermott, who is favored in the campaign to succeed Joe Morris at the helm of the CLC, was paid a total of $53,190.89 by the UAW in 1975 in his capacity as vice-president, according to the labor department documents. Of this, $38,702.38 was salary and $14,488.51 was for expenses.

In 1976, the documents show, McDermott received a pay boost, but it was within the guidelines established by the Canadian government. His total compensation for the year was $54,709.24, of which $40,608.24 was salary and $14,101 was expenses.

In 1977, however, McDermott received a pay raise totalling $3,784.61, or almost $1,800 more than the $2,400 annual maximum available to other workers under the Trudeau government's wage and price control program. McDermott's total compensation in 1977, the documents show, was $59,021.87. Of this, $44,392.85 was salary and $14,629.02 was compensation for expenses.

Senator Lawson could not be reached for comment. His senate office in Ottawa said he was in Vancouver, but his Vancouver office said he was "out of town" and could not be reached by telephone.

In addition to his Teamsters' salary, Lawson also receives $31,200 a year as a senator, of which $5,600 is tax free. Thus, the independent senator from B.C. is now making an annual total of at least $102,017.08.

In endorsing the government's wage and price control program, which was condemned by almost every other labor leader in Canada, Lawson had praise for the "social contract" system worked out in Britain. Under the British system, every worker, regardless of position, was limited to a £6 increase.

Two prominent former political leaders, it's reported, would dearly love to be B.C.'s first ombudsman.

B.C. could do worse. Both earned reputations as honest, no-nonsense politicians who weren't shy about speaking out for the rights of John Q. Public versus the government.

The Victoria Symphony office reported last week that during the orchestra's 14-day tour of southern B.C. and Alberta standing ovations were the rule.

But another source says maestro Laszlo Gati bribed audiences in pre-performance comments by saying that if it got a standing ovation the orchestra would play an encore.

A cynic could interpret that as the desire of most people to get as much as possible for their money, while loyal Victoria Symphony fans would say Gati was simply tutoring the uninitiated in what has become, in Victoria, an appropriate response whether deserved or not.

What's in a name? A lot, if it's Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch — the longest place name in the U.K., with 58 letters.

It happened to crop up in Monday's People column, and by Tuesday morning, a number of readers had phoned to tell us we'd misspelled it.

So we ran a correction, getting the correct spelling from a photograph of the name painted on the Welsh village's station.

Now, however, we hear we've misspelled it again, since the station name was painted by an Englishman who couldn't spell in Welsh.

If anyone else has views on the spelling, we'll expect them to pronounce the name before we'll listen to their spelling.

Port McNeill teachers have invited education Minister Pat McGeer to come up on Saturday for some political mudslinging.

It is a party called a Mudfest — and it is also a protest. Dave Manning, president of the Vancouver Island North Teachers Association, says it is outrageous that McGeer allows only four per cent of the cost of a new school to go towards ground clearing.

Manning says this formula may be fine for for Victoria which has flat, cleared land but in the north there are trees to cut, rocks to move and swamps to drain.

In any case, the fun starts at 11.30 a.m. and there will be a gumboot race, mud hurdles and something called a muckball game. They hope McGeer will come up and play.

CFB Esquimalt had its own boozin' bear as a mascot back in the 1920s when the naval base was HMCS Naden.

Naval historian Ron Godden says retired Cmdr. G.B. Barnes recalls HMCS Thiepval making a special trip to Japan via the Aleutians and the Kamchatka Peninsula in 1924 to set up special fuel caches for the round-the-world seapane flight of Major Stuart McLaren.

Two bear cubs were brought back as souvenirs, one of them dying from burns it received when it slept too close to a boiler.

The other survived to become the Naden mascot, acquiring a taste for the hard stuff and becoming a frequent visitor to the wardroom and base messes.

Reports have it the bear ended up as a ruined bruin, finally dying from a liver disorder.

They're not racehorses, and they don't look at all built for speed. But the pundits tell us the five starters are the pre-race favorites for the lighthearted Sooke River Raft Races to be held Saturday and Sunday over a 2½-mile course from the Sooke Potholes to the Sooke River Flats.

The event, organized by the Sooke Volunteer Firemen's Association, is the community's answer to England's Oxford-Cambridge university boat race.

What the rafters lack in style and finesse they more than make up for in zany enthusiasm. And although there's $500 in prizes, the emphasis seems to be on having fun.

This year there's a Captain Cook flavor to the races, and someone purporting to be the intrepid explorer will be the starter at noon Saturday.

Refreshments will be available on the Flats near the finishing point, and there's no admission charge for spectators.

With native Indians unhappy about Capt. Cook bicentennial plans and some of the Tall Ships opting out, it's no small surprise to find Saanich has decided to have Cook's ship, the Resolution, sailing backwards.

The municipality's hall on Vernon Avenue has a pretty impressive pictorial salute to the bicentennial bedecking one of its outer walls, clearly visible from the highway.

Prominently displayed is the stern of the Resolution.

Unfortunately, the artist appears not to be nautical by nature.

The sails are depicted in front of the mast instead of behind, which would force the squarerigger to have to be sailed backwards.

Conservative leader Vic Stephens has named a veteran newspaperman as his assistant.

But John Green, the chap in question, isn't remembered by most folk for his journalistic exploits, laudable though they might have been.

Green (whisper it lest non-Tories hear) is best-known as a true believer in the elusive Sasquatch.

He has written extensively about Big Foot and is classed as almost a guru when it comes to the legendary half-man, half-beast creatures.

Green is 51, married with five children and plans to move to Victoria from his home near Harrison Hot Springs, in the heart of Sasquatch country.

He is currently treasurer of the Tory party in B.C. and contested the provincial leadership back in 1971.

New Annie Oakleys Right on Target

By PAT DUFOUR

Three Annie Oakleys are among 21 teenage sharpshooters from across Canada who are completing seven days of intensive competition at Heal's Range.

Eighteen of them will represent Canada in England as the Army Cadet Bisley Team shooting it out with the world's best in rifle competitions.

At 14, Michelle Bellefeuille of Sault St. Marie, Ont., is already a sergeant and shares the honor of being the youngest on the team with David Biddinton of Moncton, N.B.

Among those shooting it out for spots on the team are Paul Bule and Don Hughes of Victoria's Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Army Cadet Corps.

Regardless of the weather, it's been rise and shine at 6 a.m. each day, getting down to range work at 9 a.m. and working right through except for a brief lunch break until 4 p.m.

There's little to distinguish the girl shooters from their companions as they battle it out under the watchful eye of their coach, Major Dick Hampton of Woodland, Ont. who's been involved in rifle competition for about 52 years.

"I started at a tender age and kept at it," says Hampton.

Selection of the team began last summer at five rifle training courses across the country. Twenty from each course earned the right to shoot it out at the Connaught Range in Ottawa last August.

The 21 at Heal's Range are the best of that 100.

It won't be all work and no play. Competitions over, the team will sightsee in Britain, France and Germany.

It isn't enough to persuade her to join the army when school days are over, however.

"My mother wants me to do something important. I'm going to be a surgeon," she says.

Eavesdrop Curb Too Expensive

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Scramblers to thwart eavesdroppers who monitor the police radio network are desirable but too expensive, Saanich police board decided Thursday.

The department has 25 mobile units now and the total will be 39 before the end of the year.

Equipment to scramble the broadcast messages with even a medium level of security would cost a minimum of $25,000, board members were told, while the cost per unit for a maximum security system could be up to $2,500.

Such costs are considered unjustified, particularly as criminals can employ unscrambling equipment to continue illegal monitoring.

The board endorsed a suggestion by Police Chief Bob Peterson that the department attempt to tighten up radio security through stricter operating procedures.

Peterson said the B.C. Police College has developed a standard radio code which Saanich police were to start using tomorrow, but there are some teething problems which are still being sorted out.

Meanwhile, he said, officers have been instructed to observe standard operating procedures and have been issued with other guidelines — for example, the rule that names and addresses of complainants are not to be broadcast unless deemed absolutely essential.

Board chairman Mayor Mel Couvelier said he has heard of cases where residents reporting complaints to the police have been reluctant to give their names and addresses, for fear of exposing themselves to some retribution by casual listeners.

In at least one instance, a resident whose name and address were broadcast later had his house vandalized.

"I'm concerned about your sources drying up if we can't solve the scrambling problem," he told the police chief.

Couvelier asked if anonymous calls receive the same degree of priority in police response as those whose sources are fully identified.

Peterson conceded that in practice, anonymous calls tend to receive a lesser priority because they often create difficulties, including the problem of checking back for further information and also the doubt that such calls could be used for diversionary purposes by criminals.

As an example of the latter, he recalled an incident several years ago when thieves called out Saanich firemen from the Shelbourne fire station to a non-existent fire, and made off with the station's television set.

Board members agreed that the B.C. Police Commission should be asked to study the whole problem of illegal radio monitoring, particularly from the viewpoint of legislative controls.

Policing Cost Break Wanted

Saanich police board wants a better financial break from the provincial government because a provincial jail and nearly 10 miles of arterial highway lie within Saanich police department's area of jurisdiction.

Board members Thursday approved in principle the draft of a brief on the subject which will be submitted to a provincial task force studying policing costs in B.C. and cost-sharing between the three levels of government.

The brief points out that the Vancouver Island regional correctional centre at Wilkinson Road has a considerable financial impact on the police department's manpower and equipment.

Last year, for example, there were two hostage and eight escape incidents at the institution, not to mention four cases of inmates being unlawfully at large and 36 situations involving police attendance on minor calls.

In manpower alone, said Police Chief Bob Peterson, those incidents cost the municipality $3,892.

But the board chairman, Mayor Mel Couvelier, said if a proportion of the department's fixed costs are included the figure would be much higher.

With regard to highways, the brief notes that 7.4 miles of Highway 17 (Patricia Bay) and 2.3 miles of the Trans-Canada are in Saanich, accounting for 15 per cent of all Saanich road accidents and police activity last year.

Mail Rate Goes Up Tomorrow

If you put a 12-cent stamp on a letter tomorrow it will be an April fool joke on whoever receives it.

There will be postage due.

Greeting cards and other third-class mail will go to 12 cents from 10 cents.

The rate to mail letters to the U.S. will be 14 cents but it will cost 30 cents to mail to any other country, up from 25 cents.

Registration will cost $1.25 effective tomorrow while special delivery will go to 80 cents.

Letters dropped in the box today with 12-cent stamps on them will be delivered, even if they are not picked up until Saturday. Any letter mailed Saturday, however, must have a 14-cent stamp, a post office spokesman said.

The increases will reduce the annual post office deficit by about $125 million, according to Ottawa estimates.

NO CHARGES OVER 'BOMB'

Saanich police say no charges will be laid in connection with a hoax bomb threat that cleared about a dozen homes near 2551 Sinclair Thursday.

Staff Sgt. George Dennison said the incident involved a 14-year-old juvenile and the investigation is completed.

An object removed from a garage at that address by an armed forces explosives team was identified as a large bag and a cardboard box containing plywood.

No Ozard Pact: Gov't

Ozard claims he was fired as director of marketing in Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy's tourism ministry Feb. 16 after only two hours on the job.

Ozard has taken court action for a ruling whether he is employed by the ministry and the case is expected to go to trial in a month or so.

In a Supreme Court statement of defence, the government says that Ozard was asked to meet the deputy minister after Feb. 13 for final discussions about his employment.

But before the meeting Ozard "caused to be published in a daily newspaper, circulating in the city of Victoria, a message wrongfully implying that approval by the PSC of his appointment to a position in the civil service resulted from the support and help received by the plaintiff from ministers of the Crown and public servants."

Ozard met the deputy minister Feb. 16 and when asked for an explanation of his conduct "asserted that the publication was something he had to do, and that he would do it again."

Ozard was then requested to leave the offices having not carried out any duties of his proposed employment.

Pending the discussion with the deputy minister, the government argues, Ozard was not employed by the government and no contract of employment existed.

But, if there was a contract of employment, "which is denied," the government said it was properly terminated according to law.

Ozard, in two affadavits filed at the courthouse, says the government offered to employ him as director of marketing at the ministry of the provincial secretary and travel industry at a salary of $2,035 a month. The letter, dated Feb. 1, from A.G. Richardson, chairman of the Public Service Commissiomn, said the commission approved his appointment to the position of Program Manager 2.

Ozard said he accepted this offer Feb. 3 by telephoning W.R. Henderson, the ministry's director of personnel. On Feb. 13, he said he took his oath of office and on Feb. 16 he started work.

After about two hours, he said he was requested by W.R. Currie, deputy minister, on behalf of the government, to leave the office and await further notice about his duties.

He said around Feb. 24 he received a letter dated Feb. 22 from Richardson which said "I regret that the offer of employment in my letter to you of Feb. 1, 1978, resulting from the above competition is herewith withdrawn. I understand in your discussion with the deputy minister of travel industry that you have been given the reason for this action."

Lax Sale Under Fire

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said Thursday he intends to ask the Liquor Administration Branch to look into what appears to be lax sales supervision at Saanich liquor stores, where juveniles have been able to obtain large quantities of beer, liquor and wine.

His comment followed a police board meeting which was told by Police Chief Bob Peterson that during a seven-month period last year, police in spot checks of liquor outlets seized 1,816 bottles of beer, 866 ounces of liquor, 21 bottles of wine and 18 bottles of cider from juveniles.

BAY BURNED IN OVEN DRAW

BURNABY (CP) — A man who thought he had won a microwave oven in a draw at a Bay department store says nothing's cooking in the prize department.

David Austen of New Westminster entered the store Tuesday night with his wife and some friends, and was handed a ticket which won the grand prize — a microwave oven — in a draw.

But the Bay says Austen was not eligible.

John Hansen, manager of the Bay outlet, said the store was closed at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, then re-opened between 6 and 9 p.m. for employees in appreciation of their work during a hectic Bay Day sale.

Security guards were on duty, he said, but did not recognize all staff members so that some members of public, like Austen's party, were able to get in.

When it was determined that Austen did not work for the Bay, another ticket was drawn.

"I explained to the customer that it was a private party, and that he crashed it though not intentionally," said Hansen.

Teachers Told to Fight Against Racism

VANCOUVER (CP) — The battle against racism must be fought by every teacher in British Columbia, a member of the B.C. Teachers' Federation task force on racism said Wednesday.

Gary Onstad, a Burnaby teacher, told the BCTF's annual meeting that "racism must be the concern of all teachers in this province."

"We must recognize there's a long, hard road ahead, and prejudice, bigotry and racism will not be erased overnight."

"Silence on social issues, on racism, is often taken to mean you condone it," he added.

Onstad said there seems to be a "speak, hear and see-no-evil" approach to racism in B.C.

"It amounts to this: if we deny the existence of racism, maybe it will go away," he said.

He was referring to the BCTF's slide-tape presentation on racism, banned last year by Surrey and Langley school boards, which illustrates examples of racial discrimination in B.C.'s history.

Surrey and Langley banned the presentation because the school boards said they believed it brings up a "negative past."

Onstad said the presentation has had widespread use throughout B.C., and has been supported by native and ethnic organizations and other groups.

The task force also recommended that school boards and the ministry of education develop an equal employment policy.

Task force coordinator Wes Knapp said the recommendation is aimed at giving people from minority groups equal consideration in educational jobs, and does not call for a quota of employees from multicultural backgrounds.

The delegates also urged school boards to ensure that all students take sewing, cooking, and woodworking courses.

Lynda Copelin said most schools steer girls into sewing courses, and boys into mechanics.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS

1. BLIGHT not plight or slight. Anything very worrying is not slight to the person concerned. Simply a "plight" (not of any specified nature or degree of severity) is somewhat vague, compared to BLIGHT, as a potential cause of great worry.

7. PAINT not pains. Pains in the eyes relate to overdoing the eye work, rather than to the "kind" of work in question.

8. PALACE not palate. Broadly, "civilized worldly pleasures" are more comprehensive than those of the palate, so PALACE is the better answer.

9. DIVES not diver. As actually "seen," in relation to the question of being "graceful," it's directly a question of DIVES in any case. A diver is not necessarily in the act of diving.

10. MEWS not news. The clue favors more or less fortuitously heard sounds: cat MEWS may well be heard "pretty often," while news may well be heard with clockwork regularity.

13. BOOK not boob. The idea of criticism being "proper" applies more reasonably to a poor BOOK than to a boob.

14. PAY not pry. The operatives concerned may not see it as "prying."

16. LESS not loss. "His price" as opposed to LESS, yes; but there is no suggestion that he might sell at a loss, that his mood on the subject should be relevant.

22. CLEANER not cleaned. It would be easy to see through if it were cleaned, "easier" to see through if it were CLEANER.

23. WEEDY not reedy. WEEDS are considered undesired vegetation which can eventually fill up a lake, while reeds are tall, slender grasses, natural for the shoreline.

CLUES DOWN:

3. GRASS not glass. Since nobody would choose to drive over any shattered glass that might happen to be on the road, the clue's reference to "a chauffeur, in his job" (smooth, dignified, formal) has more point for GRASS.

5. VALID not vapid. Even though your argument is VALID, you can't expect people necessarily to appreciate your point. As far as you are concerned, you don't advance a vapid argument.

6. INFECTIOUS not infections. A "word that describes" is an adjective, rather than a noun.

11. WHY not way. "WHY" links up more convincingly with the idea of bewilderment, or failure to understand. One asks the way simply because one requires direction.

13. BOY not box. An empty box may be obviously of no account.

14. POLICY not police. The clue applies directly to a POLICY, or to a police attitude or statement, say, rather than simply to the police as a body.

18. SEEK not seem. To seem is to appear, so it is pointless to say "seem to appear."

Oscar's Golden Night Monday

Fifty years of the art, glamour and sheer magic of the movies will be saluted when the 50th Annual Academy Awards are presented live Monday, April 3 at 7 p.m. on Channels 2, 4 and 6.

Bob Hope will serve as the sole master of ceremonies for Oscar's Golden Anniversary. The comedian's appearance will mark the first time since 1967 that one person has presided over the telecast. Hope, coincidentally, was the emcee at that time. More closely associated with Oscar than any other Hollywood celebrity, Hope previously has made 22 appearances on the awards, a record. He also has served as master of ceremonies 15 times, another record, and was the sole emcee on eight occasions. He first officiated at an Oscar show in 1940.

Those who have been set as presenters to date include Fred Astaire, Richard Burton, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Faye Dunaway, Goldie Hawn, Mark Hamill, Janet Gaynor (winner of the first Oscar for Best Actress in 1928), Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Walter Matthau, Steve McQueen, John Travolta, Henry Winkler and Natalie Wood. Also, there will be two special presenters, R2-D2 and C-3PO, the robot stars of Star Wars.

Bob Hope Is Back

Sammy Davis Jr. will perform in a special tribute to the 50th Anniversary of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Davis will sing "Come Light the Candles," a new song written for the telecast by three-time Oscar winner Marvin Hamlisch and Carole Bayer Sager. Hamlisch will appear at the piano with Sammy Davis Jr. for the presentation of "Come Light the Candles."

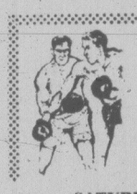

Also appearing on the program will be Debby Boone, who will sing the nominated song, "You Light Up My Life," from the film of the same name. Miss Boone's single recording of the song has become one of the biggest selling records in history, and she recently was awarded a Grammy as "Best New Artist."

Twenty-four countries have submitted entries for consideration for Best Foreign Language Film Award achievements in this year's Oscar Awards.

Several special awards will be presented on the Oscarcast. Film producer Walter Mirisch, who, as head of the Mirisch Corporation has guided such films as Some Like It Hot, The Apartment, West Side Story, In the Heat of the Night, and Fiddler on the Roof, will receive the coveted Irving G. Thalberg Memorial Award; Charlton Heston will receive the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award for "continually putting his talents and energies at the disposal of projects and causes which have benefitted our industry, the community of Los Angeles and the nation," and film editor Margaret Booth, who, as supervising film editor at MGM from 1936 to 1968 helped determine the shape and final form of nearly every MGM film produced during that time, will receive an honorary Oscar for "many years of exceptionally distinguished service to the motion picture industry as a film editor."

Howard W. Koch will produce the program. This will be the sixth time in the past seven years that Koch will have produced the Oscar

John Hearn's Collectibles

A. Weber of Victoria, B.C., who collects cameras asks if there is a Canadian collector's association. The same mail brought the answer to that one — The Photographic Historical Society of Canada.

There appear to be three main categories of collectors — the equipment collector who is mainly interested in historic cameras, photographic books, pamphlets and periodicals that help to date and document the pieces in his collection; the antiquarian photographer who is interested in obsolete or little used historic photographic processes, and the image collector who is interested in the social documentation or artistic significance of historic photographs. He is looking for interesting daguerrotypes, ambrotypes, tintypes, lantern slides, stereoscope view, etc., etc. All these groups are represented in the society. There are 200 members and they publish a national newsletter. For more information write to Mr. Ron Anger, 191 Craighurst Ave., Toronto, Ont., M4R 1K2.

Letter from John Hunt of 253 Flora Street, Ottawa, Ont., K1R 5R8, who collects old mail order catalogues. My collection, he says, is both American and Canadian — Wards, Sears, Simpsons, Eatons, Penneys + and growing slowly. My oldest is a Robt. Simspons Winter 1904-5. Old catalogues are not easy to find. For years they found their way to the outhouse. More recently when it became known they might be collectibles, people started to save them and these therefore are not scarce or valuable. Mr. Hunt is glad to refund the postage of any old catalogues which people send him and is prepared to pay a reasonable price. For a hint at that, the most expensive old mail order catalogue I have seen is $30 for a 1905 Eaton's catalogue — but this was in perfect mint condition. If you knock off about a dollar a year and halve it for less than mint condition you should be about right.

Something new in fakery — or rather, it is probably not new but I've only just heard about it, involves blue flower stoneware jugs and crocks. You take a nice old jug in good condition — it might well be worth $25 as is — and you paint an authentic looking blue flower design on it using the proper ceramic glaze, and then you refire it in a kiln at the right temperature. The new glaze fuses with the old and presto, you've just added $100 to the price.

The faking of antiques has such a long history that there are many old fakes which are themselves antiques now and much sought after. Centennial years, for example are great occasions for reproducing the past — possibly with no intention to mislead; but years later those same reproductions are themselves getting old and looking more authentic by the minute. The U.S. Centennial of 1876, for example was a great year for early American reproductions and made with loving workmanship. These fakes are now 100 years old themselves and very valuable.

Then there are restorations, a very tricky subject. There is nothing unusual about furniture suffering some damage in the course of normal wear and tear. If it is not too bad you simply repair it. If you are anything of a craftsman you may well make a good job of the repair and 100 years later, who cares. If the repair, done with the same loving care is carried out more recently — say last week — is that faking it? The answer has to lie somewhere in intent. I don't suppose those old craftsmen, putting a new rung in an arrowback chair deliberately darkened the wood afterwards, putting a new rung in an arrowback chair deliberately darkened the wood afterwards — it was there for use, not show. It is only when we pretend it is original that we become guilty of misrepresentation.

Readers' letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o Victoria Press, R.R. 1, Lowbanks, Ont., N0A 1K0.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Richard's Game for His Name

By H. SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Richard K. (for Kent) Weber, also known a Rick Weber, and at one time billed as Rick Ely, is the handsome Dr. Tom Crawford in the long-running soap, "Love of Life." The reason for all the names has to do with Union regulations.

"When I first started as a professional actor in California," said Weber, "I found out that my real name, Rick Weber, was already being used by another actor, so I took my mother's maiden name of Ely. Ron Ely, who played Tarzan on TV, was on the scene at the time and the confusion between us never stopped. In fact, I was sitting in an agent's office once and he kept looking at me funny, finally asking if I was sick since I had obviously dropped so much weight. Of course, he was thinking of Ron, the husky TV Tarzan."

When Rick moved to New York to take the job on "Love of Life," he went back to Richard K. Weber but everyone calls him Rick. When he was still Rick Ely, he starred in the short-lived but highly praised prime time TV series "The Young Rebels" during the 1970-71 season. The show was cancelled in mid-season by ABC, which came as a surprise to everyone connected with the series, since the ratings were good. However, it was the period when the prime-time access ruling was passed and the networks had to relinquish the early time slot to the local stations and "The Young Rebels" became a victim in the process.

"I was bitter for awhile and took it all so personally," the actor said, but my drama coach and mentor, Bennes Mardenn, helped me to see things clearly. When the role of Crawford in the soap came up, it meant moving to New York from California and I had to give it a lot of thought since I really prefer California."

Despite his preference for the West Coast, Rick recently signed with "Love of Life" for another year, so he'll be around for some time to come.

As for his character of Tom Crawford and Tom's long-standing relationship with Arlene, Rick admits he wouldn't be as patient as Tom has been.

"I would tell Arlene to get her act together and call me when she did."

PLOT PORTENTS. How will Marlena take to Don's illegitimate daughter Donna on "Days of Our Lives"? Will David's detective track down Trish and the baby? Linda still wants that big wedding with Bob and won't settle for less.

Brock gives it the old school try but has no influence on despondent Kay-in "The Young and the Restless." Lance can't forget that night with Leslie, while brother Lucas thinks mainly of Lorie. Meanwhile, Stuart Brooks, who's feeling very lonely these days, turns to Liz.

On "Edge of Night," Kevin is kicked off the Crime Commission and everyone cheers this move except his wife, Raven. Raven also tells Geraldine (Kevin's mother) that she's pregnant, not knowing that Kevin has been sterile for some time.

We find out what Vince's secret duty is — he's working incognito for the vice squad — on "One Life to Live." Aldo moves to take Cathy's ring — the important item that links Brad with the late Lana.

"All My Children's" Erica nudges Brooke out of a job and Myrtle Lum calls Linc, saying that she "saw" Kitty Tyler alive.

Loretta is the proud mother of quintuplets on "Forever Fernwood." Charlie appears to be the real father, and the babies seem quite normal, despite the predictions of some who said they would be monsters. Tom and Penny are solidly hitched, and Merle feels at home again with Wanda. That leaves evil Eleanor still at bay.

Richard Weber and Sofia Landon

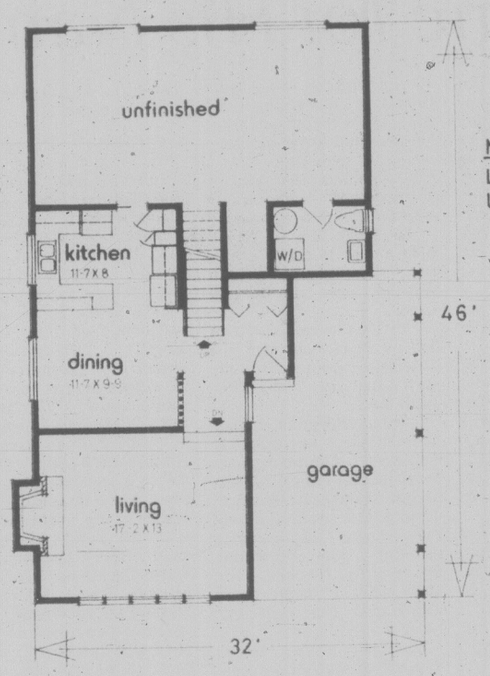

CHANNEL CHATTER. The pretty new face on "Guiding Light" belongs to Sofia Landon, who is playing Diane Ballard. Sofia's background is the stage and she was nominated for the Drama Desk Award-1977 as Best Actress for her performance in the Off-Broadway production of "Peg O' My Heart" . . . Country western singer Bill Anderson, who also had a fling as host of the game show, "The Better Sex," makes an appearance on "One Life to Live" on April 10. He'll appear as himself in a sequence that takes place at the Blue Ridge Club and he'll sing a solo and duet with Jill Voigt, who plays singer Becky Lee Hunt . . . Marie Cheatham (she's Stephanie Pace Wyatt in "Search for Tomorrow") will be one of the co-hosts on "The Mike Douglas Show" in the near future, when Mike presents a week-long salute to daytime villains (and villainesses). Eileen Fulton (she's Lisa Coleman in "As the World Turns") will also co-host with Mike on one of the days during the week.

Henry Slesar, who used to write for "Edge of Night," has joined "Search for Tomorrow." Henry is also a mystery writer of some considerable reputation, but he won't be bringing those particular talents to bear on "Search" . . . Marie Masters (Susan Stewart in "As the World Turns") will be in Tallahassee, Fla., this weekend as part of a gala festival called Springtime, Tallahassee. Marie is the special guest celebrity for the weekend festivities . . . Jeffrey Pomerantz (Peter Janssen in "One Life to Life") just finished a run at New York's Public Theater in the play, "Museum." Jeff has done four plays in a row this year, while keeping up with his soap opera role.

Compact, Low-Profile Design

The pleasingly rustic exterior of this three-bedroom, no-basement home conceals a wide variety of convenience features unexpected in a compact, low-profile design.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV mailbag:

Q. How about some background on Melissa Gilbert, the little girl who plays Laura Ingalls in "Little House on the Prairie?" — J. G., Scottsdale, Ariz.

A. Melissa Gilbert, 13, started acting over 10 years ago. She first appeared before the cameras at age 3 in a television commercial. She was so good that dozens of commercials followed, as did appearances on "Gunsmoke," "Emergency" and "Tenafly."

Her interest in show business comes by way of her father, the late comedian Paul Gilbert; her mother, a former dancer-actress who Melissa credits for teaching "me not to act but to think," and her grandfather, Harry Crane, a top television writer.

After three years of playing Laura Ingalls, Melissa confesses, "I love to work except for one thing; it keeps me from doing things with my friends, but that's all."

The teenager plans to go to college to study art. "I don't need to study drama because I think I already know how to act."

Q. Could you tell me where I can write to Parker Stevenson of "The Hardy Boys?" — R. E., Victoria, B.C.

A. I suggest you write to Universal Television, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

Q. Could you tell me why they didn't use the real cast of "Logan's Run" on the series that was shown on television. — D. C., Jefferson City, Mo.

A. Most of the original cast of "Logan's Run" did not want to commit themselves to the rigors of a weekly television series. Consequently, they rejected offers to star in the show. As it turns out, they were better off not joining the television cast, since CBS recently cancelled the show because of poor ratings.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

Mary Brian: Everything Is So Anti-Hero

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — Mary Brian, Ronald Colman's love interest in Hollywood's first "Beau Geste," hasn't seen Marty Feldman's "The Last Remake of Beau Geste," and she doesn't quite think she wants to.

"There's no special reason I haven't seen the picture," Brian said the other day from her home in a Los Angeles suburb. "I've just missed it.

"I don't know why gallants aren't popular anymore," she said. "Everything today is so anti-hero, so that anyone who is brave and self-sacrificing is considered a caricature."

Born in 1908, Brian became a motion picture star during the period when film heroes were brave and handsome and self-sacrificing, and heroines were lusciously lovely.

On screen from the age of 16, she made her movie bow as Wendy in the silent "Peter Pan."

Jesse Lasky Jr., in his funny autobiography, "Whatever Happened to Hollywood?" recalls that the casting of Peter Pan set casting directors to beating the bushes for "a waiflike creature of gossamer fantasy and a kind of neuter charm," for Peter couldn't be macho, nor could he be too distinctly feminine.

Herbert Brennan, the film's director, "had been testing every flat-chested, wide-eyed actress he could locate," Lasky wrote.

The search for Peter Pan turned up a charming unknown named Mary Brian who was tested and who would certainly have gotten the part had not another young unknown, Betty Bronson, been tested, too.

"Dad found himself juggling with an embarrassment of riches," Lasky Jr. wrote. "The problem was resolved by giving Bronson the part of Peter and Brian that of Wendy."

After that, though Brian wasn't restricted to playing creatures of "gossamer fantasy," she was confined to playing virginal types until, in 1934, she noted:

"I am the Perpetual Ingenue. I shall never escape, and, by this time, I know it. If I violated every decency of every morality code in the country, no one would believe it."

Still, though the ladies she portrayed were inclined to be bland, she was much beloved by the public so that she was cast in major films, among them "The Virginian," "Beau Geste," "The Front Page" and "The Royal Family of Broadway."

"I can't think of a single remake that's been as good as the original," Brian said without mentioning specifically "Beau Geste," "The Front Page" or "Peter Pan," each of which has been made and remade.

"I don't know why that's true unless it's because times change and what was good at one time seems out of place in another."

After a brief marriage to magazine illustrator Jon Whitcomb, Brian was married in 1947 to film editor George Tomasini, who died in 1964.

She made her last picture, "Dragnet," the year of her second marriage but worked in television playing the mother in the series "Corliss Archer" in the 1950s.

"I don't anticipate working again," Brian said. "Not as an actress. However, I do a lot of work as a painter. Painting has become completely time-consuming."

She calls herself a realistic painter and specializes in portraits.

As a star of the era when movie heroes were larger and more perfect than life, Brian is puzzled by the flawed personalities adorning the contemporary screen.

"It seems that we just can't stand having heroes today," she said. "And that applies in literature as well as in pictures.

"There's a constant tendency to put people down.

"When I was growing up, we thought it was wonderful to have people we could look up to because we hoped that someday we could be that brave and unselfish and admirable.

Mary Brian

Pat Barclay

It's no use. For weeks I've been fighting the urge to comment on the Great Canadian Literary Circus, better known as the Conference on the Canadian Novel, which was held at the University of Calgary in mid-February. But it's spring, and the urge has won.

The conference, if you recall, brought together writers, publishers, readers, book sellers and teachers in an ambitious attempt to discuss and evaluate Canadian fiction. Its climax was the revelation, lottery-draw style, of three controversial lists: the "top ten novels" this country has produced, the "top ten works in various genres," and the "most significant 100 novels," in order of significance no less, from Wacousta on down — or up, if you'd rather.

The lists were compiled from ballots sent in by some 140 Canlit specialists across the country who were provided with a list of 200 suggested titles, with room for write-in nominations. The final selections have been widely publicized and should not need repeating here. But a few assorted comments from this corner may be in order:

MACLENNAN

WIEBE
. . . novel ignored

The top ten choices in both novel lists (they vary slightly) probably deserve their elevation, at least for now. The lists, as everyone has pointed out ad nauseum, are not meant to be carved in stone. They're more of a temporary plaster cast, like the ones Boy Scouts make of footprints in the bush.

Canlit specialists across the country may be well-read, but they're scarcely up to date. The most exciting thing about the "100 best" list is the number of recent novels which deserved a place and failed to get one. This is doubtless because academics are so busy teaching what they already know that there's little time left over for absorbing anything new. This may yet prove to be the definitive argument in favor of the sabbatical year.

Canlit specialists, like everybody else, are human. How else to explain those choices which strike the cynical eye as more fashionable than considered? Did anyone who picked Richler's The Incredible Atuk for 100th place, for instance, actually read the book? Richler's name on the cover is the chief thing Atuk has going for it. Its inclusion would not matter if better novels had not been passed over. Atwood's Lady Oracle, which clocked in as number 79, ahead of Callaghan's Close to the Sun Again (85), Ethel Wilson's The Innocent Traveller (94) and Robert Kroetsch's The Words of My Roaring (97), is another case in point. And what is Marie-Claire Blais' A Season in the Life of Emmanuel doing down in 48th place?

On the other hand, it was good to see the novels of Hugh MacLennan so well remembered. The "best 100" list contained both The Watch That Ends the Night (9) and Two Solitudes (10) among its top 10, the latter edging out Laurence's The Diviners, which landed in 11th place. The only MacLennan novel omitted from the lists was The Precipice, widely shuddered at by the critics on its appearance in 1948. (MacLennan had the nerve to tackle Canada-U.S. relations in this one, and ended up sounding embarrassingly pro-Canadian. Nice people weren't supposed to think like that in 1948.)

Although I most certainly agree with the choice of The Watch That Ends the Night as MacLennan's best novel, and would be delighted if someone would make it into a film with John Vernon in the leading role, I believe that MacLennan's two books of collected essays are even better. Titled Thirty and Three and Scotchman's Return, they make memorable reading for anyone who appreciates assured and provocative prose.

As I've complained about some inclusions it seems only fair to suggest notable titles which were excluded. How about Sylvia Fraser's Pandora, for example, which must rival The Double Hook in stylistic bravura? Felix Leclerc's The Madman, the Kite and the Island deserves recognition, as do Michael Jacot's The Last Butterfly, Elizabeth Smart's By Grand Central Station I Sat Down and Wept and Wayland Drew's The Wabeno Feast. In a less serious yet worthy vein are, of course, Donald Jack's Three Cheers for Me, Gordon Pinsent's John and the Missus, Constance Beresford-Howe's The Book of Eve and Ken Mitchell's Wandering Rafferty.

As mentioned before, the really exciting thing about the "best" lists is the number of recent novels which were left out. One of these, Rudy Wiebe's The Scorched-Wood People, can surely bear comparison with The Diviners.

Finally, a word of thanks to those 140 voters for reminding us of worthwhile novels we had forgotten. That's exciting, too.

A Fictional Look Behind the Headlines

By FRED BARNES

"Modern novels can be a fascinating — if fictional — look behind the headlines, an easy-to-assimilate course in current events. At their best, they can broaden one's eduction and give the reader a better understanding of the world today.

Take, as examples, five novels that this reviewer has rambled through over the past two months:

In The National Interest is a novel about Felix Vandenberg, U.S. secretary of state, and his diplomatic shuttle between Jerusalem, Damascus, Cairo and Amman as the Middle East again teeters on the brink of war. Pay attention, students, and learn, for the authors are well-grounded to instruct. Marvin Kalb has covered real-life secretaries for 14 years for CBS, and has written a popular biography of Henry Kissinger, on whom the Vandenberg character obviously is based. Ted Koppel is diplomatic correspondent for ABC, with 13 years in foreign affairs.

For good measure, there is a touching love story; the secretary's wife is kidnapped by the PLO; and broadcaster Darius Kane stumbles on a secret so explosive that its disclosure could precipitate the war Vandenberg is trying to prevent.

But it is the look behind the diplomatic scenes that provides the fascination of In the National Interest.

The Dragon, by Alfred Coppel, paints an even broader scene, the long-festering dispute between the communist giants, Russia and China, and efforts by nations such as Britain and the United States to prevent an open clash.

President Lambert of the U.S. is heading a large U.S. delegation to an international conference in Britain. In reality, it is a cover for a secret flying visit to Moscow and Peking to try to avert open conflict. Intelligence reports indicate that Russia's leader is ill, probably dying; that China has developed a new laser-beam weapon of terrifying potential. What he doesn't know is that a military plot to overthrow the government in Russia awaits only the proper moment — an incident with China, and that China is planning to use its weapon at the first excuse, which comes when a manned Russian spy satellite overflies China's nuclear testing area.

The Dragon raises those impossible choices that must some day confront the world's leaders in the nuclear age of super-weapons. As such, it has a good deal to say in a thrilling, yet detailed story that is remarkably easy to read.

Coppel is a former U.S. fighter pilot and long-time technical writer, and both professions stand him in good stead here. He has about a dozen novels to his credit, but The Dragon and a few more of the same calibre could catapult him into the ranks of major novelists.

It's pleasant to report that a young Canadian novelist enters this list with The Birds of Prey, a remarkable look at French politics in the de Gaulle and post-de Gaulle era. John Ralston Saul became interested in this project when he was studying in Paris.

Saul starts with a story based on fact before he branches into fiction to present the version of the story he has come to believe. General Ailleret, chief of staff of the French armed forces, was killed in the crash of a DC6 on the Indian Ocean Island of Reunion. Eighteen people died with him, only a stewardess surviving. After seven years of research Saul concluded that the crash was staged to kill Ailleret, and set out to write a novel about it, featuring as the hero a man of means and sometime-journalist named Charles Stone.

Saul sets his scene with two quotations, after asking, "Who would kill eighteen innocent people in order to execute one he considers guilty?"

The answer: "They are not criminals. They may be politicians or officers or whatever, who work in their own vicious ways but they are playing a very private game . . . The rules are not written because no one would dare to write them, and even the initiated have trouble making the right moves."

And again as Stone seeks answers: "All you have to do (you think) is find the faction and expose it. Well, that isn't the way France works. Every level hides three more levels, every faction is tied with five or 10 other factions, and even in rivalry they will protect each other against an outside threat."

The book first appeared in French, and was widely praised. Le Matin said, "From what was originally interpreted as a simple accident, a young Canadian . . . has created an affair of state."

Saul, 30, was born in Ottawa and is now executive assistant to the chairman of Petro-Canada in Calgary. Although still a part-time writer, he deserves to be heard from again.

A second Canadian resident enters this sweepstake with Blueprint, a remarkable look behind the scenes of Russia's spy apparatus. Novelist Philippe van Rjndt (The Tetramachus Collection) now lives in Toronto.

Blueprint is reminiscent of The Spy Who Came in From The Cold, and displays the same type of "inside" look at Russian spying that John Le Carre took from the other side of the fence.

Captain Alexander Roy of the KGB has built an efficient espionage network in West Germany. Suddenly, in a precision campaign, the network is destroyed, its members killed, and Roy is demoted and disgraced. In a desperate effort to find out how he has been betrayed, Roy defects to the West Germans, finally returning to be caught in the rivalry between the KGB and GRU. As the story grinds to its climax, Russian bombers stand by to attack China with nuclear weapons unless Roy can decipher the blueprint.

Shall We Tell the President? is peopled by a lot of real-life political characters, including Ted Kennedy, who in 1983 has been president of the United States for more than two years. The time has come for him to realize his greatest goal and force through a reluctant, even rebellious, Congress a rigid gun-control bill. Arrayed against him are powerful interests, but he has scheduled a special address to the Senate on the steps of the Capitol to take his fight to the people over the heads of Congress.

Six days before the speech, the FBI gets wind of a plot to assassinate the president on the Capitol steps, with an unknown senator a key figure. The agency feels that even the slightest hint of their knowledge will destroy any opportunity to identify the senator and his co-conspirators. As Special Agent Marc Andrews tries to unravel the mystery, time moves relentlessly on. Shall they tell the president?

English novelist Jeffrey Archer, a former MP, tells a rousing story, although it seems a trifle far-fetched at times. It is remarkable, however, that such a book should be written by an Englishman, and be reminiscent of The Day of the Jackal.

THE DRAGON, by Alfred Koppel. Longman. $11.75.

THE BIRDS OF PREY, by John Ralston Saul. Macmillan. $9.95.

BLUEPRINT, by Philippe van Rjndt. Lester and Orpen. $9.95.

SHALL WE TELL THE PRESIDENT?, by Jeffrey Archer. Penguin. $9.95.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

The Second World War: Slowly the facts are beginning to emerge

There are no hard and fast formulas for winning modern wars. The First World War was stalemated until the weight of American men and materials turned the scales and decided the issue. But in Vietnam, America's overwhelming superiority in weaponry was of no avail against the brilliant strategy and tactics, raw courage, fatalism and moral strength of the North Vietnamese.

The First World War is history and Vietnam, the ugly war that didn't produce any worthwhile literature or a single song, has been relegated to limbo by a conspiracy of shame-faced silence. In marked contrast, hardly a week passes without the appearance of a book about some aspect of the Second World War. Thirty-three years after the end of that conflict public interest in it seems greater than ever. Why?

For one thing, political and military leaders of the Second World War were cast in an heroic mold and, with the exception of General de Gaulle and President John Kennedy, the West has been saddled for the past 30 years with a bunch of so-called leaders, colorless, uninspired and largely inept spineless wonders, distinguished only by degrees of mediocrity.

Heroes are unfashionable — but only because we haven't any. Society needs leaders it can look up to; their absence breeds cynicism. Today, as we fearfully mock the efforts of the pygmies we have elected to rule us, we are sadly compelled to travel back in time in search of leaders who at least commanded respect, and without respect there is nothing.

Apart from the large cast of strong personalities, the Second World War had a uniqueness which undoubtedly accounts for its nostalgic appeal: it was a bridge period between the gallant past and the inhuman present. Men and women fought fiercely to retain their individualities, and idealism was not sneered at.

Although the war as a whole was horror-filled, merciless pockets of combat permitted individual valor to be seen and marvelled at and numerous examples of age-old knight-errantry were displayed. Best of all, men were not too hardened to show emotion in response to Vera Lynn's simple lyrics, and the famous British Eighth Army found as much delight in capturing a song, Lili Marlene, as it did in humbling a formidable and respected opponent.

This is of course a gross over-simplification, but how else can one account for the unending stream of books about the 1939-45 conflict and the remarkable public interest in them, not only among veterans but among young people?

War books are apt to trigger memories and trains of thought, which is how I got carried away. It had been my intention to concentrate on how much of the scientific invention and advanced technology we now take for granted — from garden sprays to space travel — had its genesis in the Second World War and why we are now getting the books of revelations.

I am alluding specifically to major scientific and technical developments, from radar to rocketry, subjects touched on in popular books like The Ultra Secret and Bodyguard of Lies. A new book, Most Secret War, by R. V. Jones, takes things a giant stride further, it being the personal account of British Scientific Intelligence between 1939 and 1945 by the man chiefly responsible for its organization.

Although I have left myself insufficient space to review this book — that will have to wait until next week — I can perhaps retrieve the situation somewhat by mentioning that this is the forerunner of a host of similar books that are due to appear this year, and that this alone justifies an explanation as to why we are now privileged to receive all this hitherto secret information.

Until recently, British law stipulated that all secret official documents be kept under wraps for 50 years — the famous Fifty-year Rule. This effectively denied useful information to foreign powers (apart from the spy network of course) and usually ensured that senior politicians involved in any controversial event were safely dead before awkward questions could be asked.

It also, of course, employed the passage of time to see to it that any public protest would seem absurd and therefore prove ineffectual. For instance, by the 1950s the Boer War controversies were not even of academic interest, and by the late 1960s even military historians had difficulty getting worked up by disclosures of hitherto unsuspected idiocies committed by political and military leaders during the First World War.

Under the Fifty-year Rule, to take just one further example, the Second World War exploits of Canada's Sir William Stephenson (A Man Called Intrepid) would have lacked the impact they had when revealed a couple of years ago had they been held back until about the year 2000.

A few years ago the British government, in one of its rare moments of near enlightened thinking, daringly threw all caution to the winds and replaced the Fifty-year Rule by the Thirty-year Rule — and so far the sky hasn't fallen down.

It goes without saying that foreign powers have not and doubtless will not learn anything they don't already know, but it does mean that we plebians are being given the opportunity to read of interesting happenings, presumably so we can now learn how clever we were in winning the war, having long ago found out how stupid the Germans were to have lost it.

As you might have expected, directly the British government eased its ban on disclosure of secrets writers began jostling one another in the Public Records Office in London in a mad scramble to be the first to reveal all, and starting now, reviewers, whether they like it or not, will be re-living the Second World War in a new dimension.

With some exceptions, of which R. V. Jones' Most Secret War is one, the first books of this kind will probably be quickies and therefore fairly lightweight, but as the serious researchers get into their stride we should get some enthralling stuff.

'A Centre of Light in Darkening World'

By JULIAN REID

Off the coast of Northumbria lies a sandy crescent of land known as Holy Island. Here, in the year 635, missionaries of the Irish Celtic church founded the monastic community of Lindisfarne, perhaps best known today for its scriptorium, where the splendid Lindisfarne Gospels were illuminated.

But, more importantly, in its own dark time Lindisfarne shone as a beacon of light — the sacred centre from which the spiritual illumination of Christianity was kindled among the barbarian invaders of England.

In 793, the original Lindisfarne was destroyed by a fresh wave of barbarians — the Vikings. But by then it had already served its historic purpose, for henceforward England was destined to remain a Christian nation. And almost 1,200 years later, the name and something of the spirit of this long-dead spiritual community were revived in another country and another, very different milieu.

The new Lindisfarne Association has its beginnings in 1973 in Southampton, New York, where the futurist and cultural historian, William Irwin Thompson, founded what he calls "a more or less rural contemplative community of students devoted to the study and realization of a new planetary culture." For, in Thompson's view, our contemporary world is in its own fashion just as much a cultural desert as the Britain of the 7th century.

But the savagery confronting us today is a new computerized barbarism of technocracy and growth-oriented economics, while the agent threatening to plow our civilization under is the bulldozer rather than the sword. And so the new Lindisfarne, like the old, was conceived as a centre of light to reillumine a darkening world.

One of its first ventures was a series of conferences held in 1974 and 1975, at which leading New Age thinkers of various persuasions gathered to discuss the current global crisis and means of resolving it. Seventeen of the informal talks they delivered have now been assembled under the title Earth's Answer — as stimulating a symposium on the imminent future and the prospects of a spiritual regeneration of humanity as anyone could reasonably ask.

The contributors to these new Lindisfarne Gospels include such prominent figures as architect Paolo Soleri, biologists Jonas Salk and Lewis Thomas, anthropologist Gregory Bateson, astronaut Russell Schweickart, and Stewart Brand, creator of the famous Whole Earth Catalogues. But some of the most noteworthy pieces derive from less celebrated participants.

Take, for instance, Brother David Steindl-Rast, an Austrian Benedictine monk, and Pir Vilayat Inayat Khan, a Sufi musician, both of whom speak profoundly and very much to the point on the relation between individual spiritual transformation and the remaking of humanity at large. Or Richard Baker-roshi, the San Francisco Zen abbot, and sociologist Elise Boulding, who present trenchant observations on the problems inherent in the attempt to create new communities of "realized, enlightened, radically sane individuals." Or Canadian ecologist John Todd, co-founder of the New Alchemy institute, who offers some very personal comments on the factors involved in switching over to the challenging new perspectives of a "holistic science" and a "sacred ecology."

But perhaps the most stimulating of all are the late E. F. Schumacher's characteristically incisive essay, "A Metaphysical Basis for Decentralization," and "The Role of the Esoteric in Planetary Culture," a far-ranging brilliant address by David Spangler, former co-director of the Findhorn Foundation in Scotland. Then, with typical elan, Lindisfarne's own founder, William Irwin Thompson, rounds it all off by synthesizing the assorted perspectives presented by his fellow-speakers in an illuminating series of "Notes on an Emerging Planet"

EARTH'S ANSWER: Explorations of Planetary Culture at the Lindisfarne Conferences, edited by Michael Katz, et al. Fitzhenry & Whiteside. $8.50.

The talks collected in Earth's Answer all date from the formative period of the Lindisfarne Association — those first tentative years during which it was rapidly evolving, in Thompson's own words, "from a handful of teachers and students in Southampton to an association of religious thinkers, scientists, artists, and scholars all around the world who are working to effect a cultural transformation of humanity."

But the four addresses by Thompson himself collected in Darkness and Scattered Light were first delivered late in 1976, when the Association was already well-established as a significant force in the emerging New Age consciousnes. On the one hand these talks pick up and expand upon the various themes introduced in Earth's Answer; on the other they comprise a natural and logical extension of the ideas adumbrated by Thompson in his own previous books, At the Edge of History, Passages About Earth, and Evil and World Order.

Yet, impressive though its forebears remain, Darkness and Scattered Light far outshines them. For anyone seriously concerned about the future of humanity, this is one of those select few volumes that deserve to rank as absolutely essential reading.

"The postindustrial world we took for granted from 1945 to 1974 is over," Thompson insists bluntly. "The next thirty years will see a countermovement away from consumption to community. . . . By 1984 we should be at the fork in the road. Then everyone should be able to see clearly the choice we need to make" — the choice, that is, between the steel-honed barbarism of an authoritarian technocracy, dominated by the executive boards of the big multinational corporations, and the more humane alternative of a collective spiritual renaissance, leading ultimately to "a new wedding of nature and culture, and a new kind of human community which can express the resacralization of Earth."

And it is, of course, to the realization of this renaissance that the new Lindisfarne is dedicated. If we pay heed to the new gospel it was founded to perpetuate — the gospel so eloquently stated in the pages of Earth's Answer and Darkness and Scattered Light — then there will be good reason to hope that our contemporary "Age of Chaos" may yet give birth to what William Irwin Thompson far-sightedly hails as "a new Age of the Gods."
